I strongly doubt you'll ever find another device on the air that implements AX.25 V2.2, and even if you did, it certainly should interoperate with an AX.25 2.0 implementation.

I have recently canceled my home Internet connection.....trying to reduce expenses.

I have high speed Internet at work...and use it there all day....so didn't see a real need for it at home as I live alone.

Having said that....Im a general class ham.... but haven't been on air in years and currently have no equip.

Im wondering if getting into digital radios such as packet would allow me some "connection" with like minded people such as Usenet groups do?

Advice? Opinions?

I haven't gotten into internet gateways because of... well, I just haven't been able to go digital for quite a while. Digital modes will definitely connect you other hams but won't replace the internet. I'll try to give a little insight as I understand it.

Portions of amateur comms may be transported via internet just like it can go over hard line. Sure, it's legal but sometimes defeats the purpose. Having said that, I think that linking a local repeater with another on the other side of the world could be cool just to chew the rag when your own repeater's dried up. Whether or not all this will replace your internet connection is a different story.

Is it technically possible to get internet via ham radio? Sure. Could we go so far as to make our own ISP and put it out there free? Sure. But... Every time an advertisement is on a web page, you'd be "breakin' da' law" since there can be no commercial or pecuniary interest. Besides, I'm pretty sure that it'd be miserably slow. Here's some brainstorming.

Hams could, if they wanted to, use TCP/IP protocol and send text, graphics and html; a'la webpage. But why? You want to talk with someone and you can't serve up the internet via ham. Retrieving a webpage could still be useful, though. Here, I'm talking about a clean, compact, commercial-free, ham-approved webpage.

Filtering out the web would be simply impossible, so, don't even try. It's feasible, albeit labor intensive, to add webpages of/by/for hams to a firewalled server that could be used to retrieve those files remotely. I don't know who would do it and it's more than what I'd like to take on. So, digital modes are the way to go if you'd like something closer to chat or file transfer.

Getting into digital modes would definitely put you in touch with other hams. You could find a packet BBS perhaps that you could even connect to and retrieve from a mailbox. Packet BBS', PSK-31, RTTY, AMTOR, Clover, Slow Scan TeleVision (SSTV), etc, all give you different benefits and uses. All this isn't the internet but it's a better way to chew the fat with other hams. Hope this helps.

P.S. The fact that this entire exchange took place via internet doesn't make it less true:) We'll just call it a pre-arranged communication schedule...

There can be no commercial or pecuniary interest _for the operator_. Merely passing an unsolicited commercial blurb along with your desired content while viewing a web page would not constitute a violation.

That would be very cool

However.....I don't really care abt web pages..... but REALLY miss my Usenet groups at home.

Like I said I still have Net access here at work for researching and looking at web pages... or downloading files.

What I was hoping was some ham way of accessing Usent-LIKE groups.....and ham email. Basically a way for like minded people to discuss various "topics" via jam radio.... just like we do right now using Usenet on the Net

This opens up a big can of worms. Take it from one who has done a few hamateur/900 Maxtrac conversions.

First and foremost: Programming is only part of the effort. You can use the well-known 'shift-key' trick, with the stock Maxtrac RSS, to enter the frequencies for 900MHz amateur systems. HOWEVER -- just because the radio takes them does not necessarily mean it will work without modification there.

One thing you need to be concerned with are modifications to the VCO to even get the thing to cover amateur frequencies. Next, you need to replace some filters in the receiver section so the front end won't be deaf as the proverbial post at amateur frequencies.

Info on the (extensive) modifications required may be found at these links:

http://www.batlabs.com/maxrad.html (scroll about 1/4 of the way down, look for '900MHz Amateur Radio Conversion')

http://www.batlabs.com/max900a.html (Details the full-blown full-coverage conversion. Not for the weak of heart or electronically unskilled).

Happy hunting.

It's a standard RS-232 modem cable. You can get them at office depot, Best Buy and other computer stores.

Hooked up to what?

For information on the radio interface, look here:
http://www.packetradio.com/wiring.htm

To hook to a computer, it's probably a typical computer to modem cable available at most computer stores. Just make sure you get the right ends (your KAM is probably 25-pin female, you PC is probably 9- or 25-pin male).

Good luck.

2.0 - but I thought that when I first sat down to do the necessary coding, I might as well implement 2.2 as well - but of course, and that I should have made clear in my first post - 2.0 compatibility will be ensured.

Sorry about the belated reply - It has been a rather busy week at work.

A few of us have done some of the 2.2 extensions, but as far as I've been able to find nobody has done the parameter negotiation stuff.
It's downward compatible, and would be fun to play with. Maybe I'll do it someday.

It is possible, some of my first usage of the internet was via packet using a program called jnos - tcp/ip encapsulated within packet protocols, I had a gateway available to me, it's fairly easy to set up, but unless you're willing to fork out some coin for high speed packet gear, it's dreadfully slow, I used to pass email, some news group stuff (usenet) and even dabbled in downloading the occasional ftp file (tiny ones, 1200 baud is awfully slow) this was before the web held anything more than a few dozen sites, archie and gopher were still widely used.

So it is possible, but you're going to have fork out some coin to make it happen.

I see

But is there any PEOPLE to converse with using such methods?

I mean.... a good analogy is this..... if you are the only one in your town who has a telephone.... but no one else has one.... then no matter how great the telephone is its pretty much useless cause its only used to converse or "connect" with other people. See my point?

Hmmmmm. APRS has messaging that can send and/or receive from Internet email. The only problem is they are short. Maybe at 9600 (soundcard connected to discriminator) you could get what you need. Use a rig with 9600 Packet with a 9600 setting and connector for easy connection. Range depends on the APRS 9600 node near you.

http://www.elcom.gr/sv2agw/ has windows soundcard (as TNC) software. You can by an interface or make one (Rig to Soundcard).

You probably want to duel boot Linux and use it's soundcard software for stability. Get a "Knoppix" CD for easy Linux Install (free). Save yourself the time and pay the $5 for shipping of the newest version.

This may not be everything you want but it's a step in the right direction and it's CHEAP! If you don't enjoy seting up stuff then don't waste your time.

HOLD THE PHONE! Hey, just get NetZero with thier free 10 hours (albeit with ads) and have your newsgroup sent to your email (subscribe to it). NetZero Email is free EVEN after your 10 hours are up! (Note you may have to set your email pop to end with ".com" or ".net" to get it to work).

P.S. There'a always low cost no ad Internet at $5 mo. Use google.

There certainly was a number, several years ago, however, since it has been a few years since I had communicated via packet (I still intend to set it all back up sooner or later, but apartment life is somewhat restrictive with regard to antennas, sigh)

I just did a dig for one of the portals I used to use and it is still up and running, with active users.

I am not sure how wide spread it is, the heard list used to be much longer.

Now as to how many people are conversing this way, I am not sure, I used to do so quite regularly, and will have my systems all set up again within the next couple of months.

Do a web search for ham packet <--> internet gateways in your area, here:

http://www.qsl.net/ik5bcu/list.htm

is a list I just brought up on google, though I have no idea how recent it is.

several of the systems show up with nslookup and dig, and hamgate.ve7sfu.ampr.org is still live as of this evening.
Though showing up with dig/nslookup is no indicator of a ham gateway still being active, my own shows up, and I haven't been up for at least three years.

Some of the gateway ops may be willing to set you up a feed,
I had several stations in the area I fed with packet mailboxes, news can easily be added (usually most ops only do the ham radio groups).

Hello,

I am interested in Packet radio and have had a good look around the WEB for info. The more I look the more confused I get!

I would like to hook up my Yaesu VX-5 handie to the PC load up some software and work Packet.

Sounds simple but what do I need? A TNC obviously but where from? Which one to go for? What software?

Many years ago (Just renewed my licence after many years) I built a TNC, cost was minimul and I simply plugged this into the PC serial port. Are such kits available now?

Tim

Hello,

I'm using packet-radio since 1998 and I've tried many softwares running under DOS and Windows.
The "perfect" DOS program was Baycom 1.6 because you had to type every command on the keyboard, so you learned how packet-radio worked...
But under Windows and with the modern computers, I learned to appreciate the comfort and versatility of Paxon which is only usefull if your BBS sysop was intelligent enough not to use the FBB-type BBS programs. Paxon is just perfect for Baybox related BBSs.

If your local BBS runs with F6FBB's server, the better choice would be WPP or Winpack if you really have no other choice.

WPP and Paxon run either directly with a TNC2 (TF 2.7) or via a driver such as Flexnet (PCflex/Flex32) or AGWPE to use a soundcard interface to generate the modulation. Another advantage is that they handle 7plus and auto Binary Split (efficient but not really useful in the FBB-BBS world).
It's the same with Winpack: TF2.7, AGW(PE) or other things.
The only advantage of Winpack is that it can run in conjunction with Winlog32 for the DX-Cluster application of the logbook. I really hate Winpack, it's the most complicated and user unfriendly packet program I've ever seen! With so many plugins and macros you will perhaps never exchange or even send any file via packet-radio.

If you try Paxon, connect a european BBS such as F6KDL-8, F6KFG-8, HB9EAS-8 or DB0FRB-8 which run with DieBox and BaycomBox server programs, to get the right idea about what the terminal program is able to do.

Never forget, when connected to a digi or a BBS, always type "H" to get the help and the commands list when available.

All you need could be found here:

Terminal programs under Windows:

-Paxon (http://paxon.de/) register for free on the homepage to get the newer 2.00.1114 version (AGWPE ability added)
-Winstop (http://www.winstop.de/index.html) not freeware, limited to 30 minutes trying periods.
-WPP (http://www.dh3ww.de/wpp/index.htm)
-Winpack (http://www.ui-view.com/winpack/index.shtml) but get ready to take your Prozac daily.

Drivers:

-Flex32 (www.afthd.tu-darmstadt.de/~flexnet/)
            (www.uspacket.net/)
            (http://www.bythebays.com/neflexnet/sw.htm)
-Soundmodem for Flexnet/Flex32 (www.afthd.tu-darmstadt.de/~flexnet/modules.html)

-AGWPE (http://www.elcom.gr/sv2agw/agwbay.htm)

Hardware:

-USB to serial adapter: UC232A (only for USB 1.1/2.0 to DB9, not USB 1.0)

-Transceiver: be sure you get the right rig if you want to go for 9k6 packet-radio, for example, the IC 706 (mk1,2,g) won't do it because of his incredibly lazy TX delay of over 300 ms even too long for 1k2! The FT 7100 (200 ms), TM 255/455 (130 ms), are handling good short TX delays for 9k6 and have the standard mini-DIN plug. The FT 51r (150 ms) is a good handy for 1k2 packet-radio. Your VX 5r could do it right too.

-Cables: it's up to you, depending of which TRX and TNC / Soundcard interface you use.

And if you need more infos, get THE search engine at http://www.copernic.com/en/index.html

HI folks,

ONe of our local emergency coordinators was given an old 286 dos machine with the old formfeed printer. He's an MFJ tnc, I think a 1274 1278 something similar.

I used similar tnc with Packet 6.1, the author was somewhere in Australia iirc.

I'm wanting to set this machine up to boot directly into that program already configured to run its capture file at a keystroke.   Other than a straight old dos terminal program such as Procomm Telix etc. any suggestions might be appreciated as well. Just thinking about that program as I knew how to make it do what's necessary for him thanks to the ascii config file <g>.

I thought I still had the software on a floppy as I saved most of the software archives from my landline BBS sysop days but can't find it.
Any help appreciated.

Hello OM-s

I have recently bought an Yaesu YR-901 CW-RTTY decoder with the user manual.
I connect it from the composite video output to a monitor.
But always when I turn it on the screen is full of a mix of occidental and japanese characters. The reset/clear buttons do nothing. Always the same. When incoming signal the screen does not change but the vumeter seems to work.

Is the memory of my device broken ?

Please help.

Hi,

I got a call from a friend about replacing the battery for the DSP-2232. The manual describes it as a 3 volt Lithium battery, with a useless part number of BT1. He was wondering about a part number so as not to have to disconnect and open the unit twice. Anybody have some info on this?

TIA,

Alan

I came across an article on broadband over power lines (BPL) tests.

 http://news.com.com/2100-1034_3-5163739.html

I found it reading Slashdot, to give credit where it is due.

My question is whether any hams in the test areas, Cincinnati, Ohio;
Allentown, Pa.; and Manassas, Va. have noted any interference or increase in noise floors. If so, on what bands? There has been a fair amount of hue and cry about this, but I have yet to see any reports of results from the current trials.

If you want to do some really heavy reading, I have a copy of the TWG report in full. >100 pages in PDF.

Let me know I'll put it up on the web.

Here in Manassas we have located a few above ground installations of BPL.
Our intent is to carefully measure radiation from the drops. At the present, the system appears to be in a test mode and is not on all the time. When it is on the noise wipes out effective HF communication for up to 100 feet around the pole but this is just a tentative observation.

Several hams have applied for the service and received no response from the

See some photos of one installation at www.w4ovh.net

Just curious, does this string of letters have any meaning?

I suspect it's just a pseudorandomly-generated "hashbuster" to help the spam avoid filters that hash the message body and check against known spam.

Exactly. As spamfiltering has gotten better, the spammers have gotten more sophisticated.

The key clue is the attachment. Besides EXE files, ANY files with the extensions COM, BAT, SCR, and PIF could also be damaging programs.
Note that sometimes a file will have a name ending in more than one extension, but only the last one matters. More trickery.

Do not open any attachments that you have the slightest suspicion of, no matter who appears to have sent them. A friend could have a virus on their machine, sending out copies to everyone in their address book.

Get a good antivirus program, including Norton Antivirus or MacAfee, which gets frequent updates of virus definitions, and run it on EVERY file received, via email, Internet, or disk.

The time and money you should put into prevention are a tiny fraction of what could be involved in recovering from a virus on your machine.

Happy trails,
Gary (net.yogi.bear)

802.11x over long distances seems to be a pretty hot topic right now, and I've been thinking of experimenting with it myself. I'm wondering what constitutes "breaking" part 15 FCC rules which would put me under part 97 rules, however, most threads seem to be moving off-topic relatively quickly.

I am aware that certain channels in 11b fall under the amateur radio spectrum, however, it seems that as soon as you step into part 97, any and all means and methods of encryption are suddenly illegal, no?

If this is the case, my goal is to stay in part 15 rules so I can maintain a shred of security. My goal is roughly 9 miles, which is just over 14km.

There are two ways of increasing the distance of your link:
#1: boost your power (up to 1 watt) - this puts you inside part 97, and therefore precludes the use of encryption.

#2: Use a high gain, directional antenna. This one I'm not sure about. Would something like a cantenna or yagi of some sort also push me into the amateur radio realm? If not, is it possible to get a connection at that distance?

11a attenuates more quickly than 11b. Therefore, I'll use 11b to increase the chances of success. How badly do obstacles (such as trees) affect the signal? (my guess is pretty badly.

I do have an amateur radio license, but like I said, I'm interested in maintaining a secure form of communication (Once I am legally ALLOWED to use encryption, I believe I can achieve a level of security that would be satisfactory.) therefore, I can't use the ham license to help out with this one.

My main question, ultimately, is whether using a high gain, directional antenna puts me under part 97. Also, if there are any other methods I could use or things I'm not thinking of, please let me know.

Finally, Are there any other ways anyone can think of to get a secure digital connection over roughly 10 miles (~15km) without using an existing infrastructure or having to lay any cable? (laying cable would require lots of permits and permission, and using existing infrastructure would cost money per month) So it would seem that using radio is about the only way. Amateur radio is the only economically feasable means of long distance radio communication, but the lack of security precludes many uses that I'm interested in. (even if they don't fit into the "spirit" of ham radio) Are there any arenas to experiment with long distance, secure, digital radio modes?

thanks

What you are suggesting will cost you about $500 for each end.

Power, antenna gain, and content. Under Part 15 there is no content restrictions, and the total power gain is determined by whether you are putting up a point to point, or a multi-user system.

You probably want to stay away from encryption, unless the ARRL publishes a password that everyone will use.

You don't need Part-97 for that. Just remember, no coax unless you have an Amp. Put the radio in a weather box, and mount it to the antenna. You will need a very good parabolic at each end, and if ice is a problem, you need to use a radome.

> There are two ways of increasing the distance of your link:

If you increase the power, you ruin the reason for spread spectrum. Like CB radio, everyone goes out and buys an amp, and then the band is "broken."

No. You will need more dB gain, and a parabolic dish or yagi is the way to go. The rule is, you have to reduce the power as the antenna gain increases, but most WiFi is low power. You would need to get up around 500 mW before this would take effect.

> 11a attenuates more quickly than 11b. Therefore, I'll use 11b to

Trees and microwaves don't work. 11a uses OFDM, and that's not really spread spectrum. 11b uses a true Direct Sequence form of spread spectrum (The older Symphony and RangeLan stuff used frequency hopping), and DS provides a coding gain.

> My main question, ultimately, is whether using a high gain, > directional antenna puts me under part 97.

High gain, no problem, until you get to 1 Watt Effective Power, You won't get to 1 Watt unless you use an amp.

Mydoom.F just got into one machine here which had McAfee running and fully updated. McAfee then could not clean it. The free cleaner from Symantec (Norton AV) did the job.

You can build up all sorts of defences, or you can switch over to Linux, which I am strongly considering for this office.

This has been hitting the newsgroups in one form or another for some time, usually carrying a virus or link to a malicious site.

I always wondered is any one ever fell for them.

Even then, if it's an executable, the sender is some one you don't know and if you do know them they don't verify they sent it on purpose...Don't open it.

If your curiosity can't stand it... save the file, then run a scan on it, but that still doesn't guarantee it won't take you to a malicious site.

They do, a perfectly sane and reasonable colleague of mine was very pleased that Microsoft had taken the time to email him at work about their new security patch. He opened it.

The term for this is "social engineering", a fancy name for conning someone.

That is arguably neither sane nor reasonable.

I know a lady who fell for that one TWICE and then got insulted when someone questioned her intelligence by having to explain all for a second time less than a month later.

Several of the old TTY guys hang around the GREENKEYS mailing list on qth.net. Some of them are in the process of distributing a batch of surplus Dovetrons as we type. Someone there should be able to answer your questions and possibly provide manuals and schematics for either one.

Hi all

Trivia question

In Victoria what was the narrowest gauge line to carry passengers (excluding the very narrow toy railways such as at Diamond cReek).

I don't know the answer by the way - I'm just curious to know which was the narrowest.

Following on from the above could such narrow gauge railways be a low cost solution for Easterm Melbourne's public transport problems?

cheers Peter

Who sez that Linux is "bulletproof" in this context? In the extreme assume that everybody switched to Linux: How long might you suppose it would take for the spammers to bust Linux and go on doing "business as usual"?

I'll give 'em ten minutes . . .

-Which is the same application as I am writing software for, incidentally. :-) My primary concern when implementing v2.2 is the parameter negotiation, but as Hank points out - if a v2.0 TNC receives a v2.2 XID (Parameter negotiation) frame, it will simply reject it and the v2.2 TNC will default to a set of parameters compatible with the 2.0 version of the protocol.

Also, once the satellite (nCUBE, www.rocketrange.no/ncube) is launched,
I will spend some time adapting the communications subsystem for amateur use - at present, we have a 1W 435MHz transmitter and a v2.2 TNC (almost done) which fits neatly inside a pack of cigarettes. Add a GPS module, and you have a nifty little APRS beacon. :-)

Cyberterrorism is a real concern. Should a Windows vulnerability be exploited and take out significant numbers of systems, it would be an advantage to have your station fully operational, including all digital modes supported by your computer. So it has a lot to do with amateur radio to have a robust computer.

It's not bulletproof at all, but it doesn't have severe design deficiencies at least. They'll still keep finding buffer overrun problems in Linux, but we won't be seeing the sort of boneheaded design flaws that Windows has.
The real problem is that the Windows issues aren't being fixed, they are just being patched around and obscured.... and then the next virus comes along.
Until the fundamental problems get fixed, it's not going to get any better.
With Linux, at least there are routes to get that sort of problem fixed if it should appear. I'm no Linux fan, but it's sure a big step up in terms of unified design.

To which I'll add that the malware writers are reverse-engineering the Wondows patches to see what the vulnerabilities are, and then writing and disseminating exploits for those vulnerabilities, secure in the knowledge that some large fraction of the Internet-connected Windows machines around the world will be running unpatched Windows.

Open source is, IMHO, far preferable to that situation. I don't run Linux at home, and at work we run AIX, FreeBSD or Linux (up-to-date) on all machines exposed to the raw Internet.

The important difference is larger window size.

For example, on one of my high speed links, a 32 frame window of 80 byte packets is optimum.

The larger window size also allows for missed-frame fill on retry.
i.e. something very much like selective reject.

It is downward compatible with V2.

Um, you mean that he doesn't believe that Congress shall make no law regarding free speech? Perhaps he believes that the Bill of Rights guarantees you the right to be a moron? Certainly if you have the right to be ignorant, he must have the right to ignore your rants.

Interesting. I wasn't a big fan of the multimode-style software on Windows. WinPSKse or Digipan was fine by me. Personal quirk maybe, but I just like the Unix/Linux philosophy of many single-purpose tools and programs instead of a big complicated one. So I'm intrigued by the multipurpose gmfsk and its use of hamlib and FFTW. Also, do you know if future versions of gmfsk will use FFTW 3.0 or stick with the older version?

Good Evenin' Ladies & Gents,

A friend gave me an MFJ-1278 [w/SSTV]. The box doesn't say it's the "B" version and it's very old so I assume it's the earlier without any extras. Anyway, I don't have any instructions for this thing and no experience with digital beyond my RigBlaster Plus. I know you can use common terminal programs with it and I'm pretty sure I have a copy of WinPack but that doesn't put my rubber on the road. I bought a copy of Lou Horzepa's book that didn't help me much. I'm not totally sure it functions properly since the LED tuning bar scrolls up and then pegs left on power up.

Can anybody direct me to a straightforward source where I can learn enough to make it go and then build on that?

I know this is one of those, "Whew!" posts. But, I appreciate any help or advice you have.

Best Regards,
Jim, WP3JQ

I've replaced mine with a pk-232mbx, I struggled with the mfj-1278 for years but I now realize I should never have bought it in the first place. There's plenty of information and tuning help at:
http://www.qsl.net/ke4mob/

The bottom line is that if you can then run fsk with it and avoid afsk, its not at all stable.

NO, "Democratic" is NOT correct, despite vast quantities of double-speak at http://www.democrats.org/about/history.html . It's their right to call themselves what they wish, but, if you examine the language, you will see that "democratic" is an adjective. An object (that is, a person) cannot be an adjective.

It's a group of people, thus a party. And if they call themselves democrats, then it is a party of democrats. But it certainly is not proven to be a democratic party. Accurate thought requires accuracy in language. It's a point probably long lost, as our voters can't even punch a hole in a card with reasonable accuracy.

The sentence structure is correct!!!

'Democratic' is an adjective! Political Party is the compound noun.

Read the headers, and, if you don't think you'll like the topic....

DON'T READ IT!!!

Self-editing what you read, and being selective, is a requirement in any truly free society. Don't bitch, because you won't change the behavior of others. You are responsible for YOU, and you alone.
If you don't like it, don't read it. (Your radio has a VFO knob, does it not? If you don't like the topic of a QSO, do you keep listening, or find something else to listen to, perhaps another QSO to participate in)

Posting this type of message just encourages more from the trolls, just killfile the users as they crosspost or off-topic post.... no big deal.. mines growing at a nice steady rate.

Bullshit.

The reason UseLessNet has 2 million different newsgroups is so that people can discuss (and read) things that pertain to the subject of that particular newsgroup. U.S. politics have nothing to do with ham radio, and the guys who are 'discussing' it crosspost to as many ham groups as they can find for the sole purpose of pissing people off.

Very common. They start a discussion in a particular group, and then some pecker head, for the fun of it, adds 9 other groups to a reply, and all the other pecker heads think it's funny so they do the same.

Cecil, you've spent 12 hours a day for the last ten years arguing with the same people on UseLessNet, so you know damn good and well how to post a message to a particular group - this crap about "I just answered somebody else" is also bullshit.

Probably where these cataracts came from. In order to have more space on my screen, I have closed the To/From/Subject on the Netscape status bar so I really have no idea where my replies are going.

Maybe you need to expand it enough to see the newsgroups line.

Newsgroups:
rec.radio.amateur.antenna, rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc, rec.radio.amateur.dx, rec.radio.amateur.misc, rec.radio.shortwave

Lately some moron has started many cross posted threads so people need to start paying more attention to the headers and if you don't you make the decision to look stupid. The cross posting dumbbells will soon find nobody reads them anymore.

Please enough of the code/no code, ARRL and other threads that only amateurs would care about. Please at least drop RRS from the newsgroup list like I did. Thanks in advance.

calling cb, Calling CB. CALLING CB !

a trolling we will go,

CB [N5PVL],

FIRST - I Guess the Question is . . .

IS this NewsGroup a "HAM" or "Shortwave" NewsGroup ?

Lets Start of the Top - Under the Major NewsGroup Heading: REC : RADIO

Are Nine (9) Categories including both "Amateur" (HAM) and "Shortwave"

PLEASE NOTE: "Amateur" (HAM): and "Shortwave" are each 'separate' Categories.

Under the NewsGroup "Category" Rec : Radio : Amateur [HAM] = 'rec.radio.amateur' there are Eleven(11) Sub-Categoies:
1. rec.radio.amateur.antenna
2. rec.radio.amateur.misc
3. rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors
4. rec.radio.amateur.packet
5. rec.radio.amateur.digital.*
Sub-Sub-Group 5A. rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc
6. rec.radio.amateur.policy
7. rec.radio.amateur.dx
8. rec.radio.amateur.space
9. rec.radio.amateur.equipment
10. rec.radio.amateur.swap
11. rec.radio.amateur.homebrew

TBL: Seems like the HAMs have their own Category and Eleven Sub-Categories plus One Sub-Sub-Category.

And the 'lowly' Shortwave Listeners ONLY have One Category "Shortwave".
{ I Say 'lowly' Shortwave Listerners SWLs because SWLs are "second class" Citizens to the Exhalted Amateurs [HAMs] }

SECOND - Getting back to the Topic of "OFF-TOPIC" since you can "Hear Everything on Shortwave": Then Nothing Is 'Off-Topic'.
Here on the "Rec:Readio:Shortwave" Newsgroup.

FWIW: All Amateurs [HAMs] please 'check' your "Call-Signs" at your KeyBoards before posting a Message or Reply to this 'exclusive' {The One and Only} "SHORTWAVE" NewsGroup :o)

TBL: REC:RADIO:SHORTWAVE = No Call Sign Required [.]

Nope! Have seen the Democrats in action (Chicago), and they sure aren't democratic.

Perhaps you went to one of their quality schools?

Very inventive, Bill. I'll bet we can find dozens of forms of sort-of, almost, enhanced and modified democracies. So at just what point, as the people give up their direct control of each issue, does a democracy ever become something else? And why do you feel that "something else" is still a democracy?

Finally, if the people of the democracy are all rascals, how do they vote the rascals out?

About the same time when "liberal" replaced the "communist" bogeyman in the vocabulary of the AM talk show drug addicts?

Democrat is closer to "Demon_Rat," a proper name of what is eating away at the foundations of the country!

My ARES group has a Packet SET in three weeks, and I don't have the budget to rush right out and buy a TNC, having spend down the Toy Budget for a new transceiver fot the truck.

My laptop is XP-only, no one (not even the buklging brains over on the Debian lists) having come up with drivers for the touchscreen (Fujitsu 1032). All my available brain power not used by Uncle is tied up in the HoneyDo list and occasionally drilling for the General Exam, so, even though I know I ought to be learning Linux, I know I will not reach adequate mastry in three weeks.

Therefore, I'm looking at the various no-TNC options which use Windows compatable software and my HT, a Yaesu VX-5R. The HT is preferred since I'm in an urban area, it works well, and I want a system I can take to a fire station and use when The Big One arrives.

Persons doing TNC-less packet on Windows are requested to advise what works and to provide any Clues as might seem relevant.

Thank you kindly.

Alas, the file that "is the most up to date information available about the set of gateways worldwide" isn't publicly available and I can't find any trace of the "maps showing where the gateways are". Can anyone tell me anything about the usage and geographic distribution of such gateways? More directly, I am wondering - if I were to set one up in Knox County, Ohio, USA, will it at all be useful to people? It would be disappointing if the area were already well served or, more probably AFAICT, nobody uses them these days anyway.

MixW works reasonably well. Lacks some features that you would get from an actual TNC, but it's pretty quick to set up.

Bill Turner <noway@nohow.com>

"Nonsense. Go check your dictionary. We are a democratic republic."

?democratic? -&- ?republic?

! BUT WHAT IS IN A NAME - AND WHO USES IT !

The Word "Democratic" is Part of the Official Name of Many Countries:
http://www.cia.gov/cia/publications/factbook/fields/2142.html

* Some use the Word DEMOCRATIC in their Official Name: People's Democratic Republic of Algeria
Democratic People's Republic of Korea
Lao People's Democratic Republic
Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya
Democratic Republic of the Congo Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste
Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia
Democratic People's Republic of Korea
Lao People's Democratic Republic
Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe
Somali Democratic Republic
Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka

* Some simply use the Word PEOPLE'S in their Official Name:
People's Republic of Bangladesh

People's Republic of China

* Some still use the Word SOCIALIST in their Official Name: Socialist Republic of Albania
Socialist Republic of Vietnam

* Some 'now' use the Word ARAB or ISLAMIC in their Official Name:
Arab Republic of Egypt
Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya
Kingdom of Saudi Arabia Syrian Arab Republic
United Arab Emirates
Transitional Islamic State of Afghanistan Islamic Republic of Iran
Islamic Republic of Mauritania
Islamic Republic of Pakistan

NOTE: Most of the above are "Nationalistic" ONE PARTY Systems [.]

FWIW: Most of the above also use the Word "Republic" in their Names.

* * * * * GETTING BACK TO THE "USofA" * * * * *

OUR NAME IS: "United States of America"
USofA=> http://www.cia.gov/cia/publications/factbook/geos/us.html

WE ARE: Constitution-Based Federal REPUBLIC with a Representative form of Government and a Strong DEMOCRATIC Tradition. Meaning "WE" Democratically Elect Our Representatives and that these Elected Representatives act for us in their respective bodies.
NOTE: This basic concept of a Representatively from of Government also applies to the Election of the President of the USofA. We the Citizens (Voters) of the USofA 'elect' Members of the Electroial College: Who then Representing "US" Elect the President.
Then the Congress Receives the Determination of the Electorial College and Comfirms the Election of the President.

Both Words: "Republic" and "Democratic" are NOT part of:

Our Form of Government: REPUBLIC [.]

Our Elective Repressentive Process: DEMOCRATIC [.]

I am working to replace an aging radio relay system with something a little more modern. The limiting factor in the replacement design is that it must be low power consumption. The wishlist includes:

1) transmit digitally-encoded analog signal,
2) remote assessment of battery condition, solar panel current output, site dewpoint and temperature,
3) possibly allow for activation of cable heater to deice antenna.

The sites cover 150 mile diameter region with few opportunities for shore power. I must get the system working off of batteries that are recharged by solar panels. The existing system already has a power infrastructure, but I could add additional gel cells to get the antenna heaters working. If that is impractical, I would like to encode and store data on site until the antenna is capable of transmitting a signal.

I have been reviewing my options and I have identified two possibilities: AX.25 and IRLP. I read quite a bit of the dissent about the utility of AX.25, although I haven't read a reasoned argument regarding its viability. I cannot have UDP packets floating about; I need error correction. The data that is being transmitted is too important to allow for package loss.

Can I get a good argument pro and con for either of these protocols, or perhaps some help in identifying an alternative technology.

ADVthanksANCE

Hi all

I have been looking at the use of APRS over packet radio and noted that many Amateurs now have mobile installations in their cars both for fun and to assist in tracking the vehicle should it get stolen.

This is quite an appealing idea however I do have one concern that I hope an experienced mobile APRS user could assist me with.

When one visits petrol/gas stations here in Australia one sees signs saying to switch off one's mobile phone as the electromagnetic radiation could cause a spark and ignite fuel vapour. It has made me wonder how to make APRS safe so that should you be filling up your car at a gas station you can be assured that a regular APRS update from your mobile APRS setup won't run a risk of causing a fire.

Have APRS users considered this possibility and what precaustions, if any,
are taken to deal with this problem?

cheers Peter

I've looked over the West Mountain website and I can't see anything about how to make the RigBlaster run on FreeBSD.  It's something I'd need to know before buying one, obviously.  Anyone here have any experience with something like this?

Jack.

Since we're not in an airport, I feel free to say this:

Hi, Jack.

If it'll run on Linux, then the Linux-compatibility stuff in FreeBSD will run it very nicely -- except for a _very_ few things.

The rigblaster just uses the DTR and RTS signals of a serial port.

Here's some code I wrote in Linux to play with mine. It basically just changes the state of the DTR and RTS signals.

Thanks for the code segment.  I may have asked the wrong question.

Here's another try:  can this box do everything a good TNC can do, and what modifications need to be made to programs that expect a standard TNC?

It's nothing like a TNC - it's basically just a switch / cable connecter for use with sound card modem programs. (It tells you that on the web page.)

   I think you're severely confused about what the rigblaster is... it's a serial interface, used primarily to assert PTT and do some audio level management for digital modes.  It has absolutely nothing even REMOTELY close to having TNC functionality.

No. The rigblaster (and the rascal--I own both) are merely soundcard interfaces. That is, they have transformers to isolate the audio circuits, and relays to operate the PTT. The rigblaster is popular for its professional look and adjustments, while the rascal is popular because it is cheap and can be thrown behind the table. Both are just audio and relay devices, and there is no TNC in them. The TNC is the Linux/FreeBSD computer.

I haven't messed with TNC's since I ran JNOS on a linux box (about 10 years ago), and now pretty much have my rascal on my windows box with either AGWPE for my APRS soundcard interface, or the various soundcard digital modes (MT63, PSK31, etc). As a matter of fact I took all my TNC's to a swap meet and sold the whole box for $5 (and it took about 2 hours to find a buyer). About the only stuff I have left is a couple of 19k baud Kantronics Radios and DRSI modems that were crap when they were new :-)

That explains a lot.  I understand a little more now.  What Unix software do you use for TNC purposes?  I see a bunch of Windows support, but there's no obvious documentation or example code for Unix boxes.  I have read that the RigBlaster comes with CDs of software, but there's no specifications out there that I can see.

I'm happy with my PK232 at the moment, but it'd be nice to lower the startup cost for packet radio for Unix users.

I don't know about FreeBSD, but most of the soundcard digital modes are supported in Linux. See http://radio.linux.org.au for appropriate links. To emulate a TNC, use soundmodem (originally a kernel driver, now a standalone user program which talks to the sound drivers) in conjunction with kernel AX.25 support (plus libax25, ax25-apps and ax25-tools).

Kernel drivers are bad news for me. I'll look into the user-level soundmodem to see how it works and if anyone's already tried to make it go on FreeBSD.

It's not really on topic for rradm, but I'd also like to hear from anyone who has any Linux/Unix software to generate those pretty "waterfall" displays I've seen on Windows software packages.

Let us pause to reflect that it is a crime for first cousins to marry in

You mean former senatator(tm) John Ashcroft (R- MO) and current are above the M-D line.

Too many Southerners are stubbornly clinging to a romantic false memory of a corrupt, incompetent oligarchy that utterly ruined the South. I speak of the Confederate States of America (1861-65), whose main accomplishment was to hoodwink an entire region into sending their sons off to fight for the oligarchy's immoral slave labor system. I call today's Confederate fetishists by their true name: suckers. The REAL rebels tried to put a stop to slavery. (The Underground Railroad had to start somewhere, did it not?) You never hear much about them though, because many were murdered, or had to flee the region.

Many Northerners are constantly claiming unearned automatic moral superiority because their side "won," while ignoring the hypocrisy in over a century of heaping scorn and slurs upon people while condemning them for bigotry.

Both sides are fscked.

I've got a pic of that but have no idea what the player's name actually is.

Read the declarations of succession for say, Mississippi and Georgia for the most florid examples of why they felt they had to break away from the Union.

http://extlab1.entnem.ufl.edu/olustee/related/secession.htm

"Our position is thoroughly identified with the institution of slavery-- the greatest material interest of the world. Its labor supplies the product which constitutes by far the largest and most important portions of commerce of the earth. These products are peculiar to the climate verging on the tropical regions, and by an imperious law of nature, none but the black race can bear exposure to the tropical sun. These products have become necessities of the world, and a blow at slavery is a blow at commerce and civilization. That blow has been long aimed at the institution, and was at the point of reaching its consummation. There was no choice left us but submission to the mandates of abolition, or a dissolution of the Union, whose principles had been subverted to work out our ruin." (Mississippi)

The Confederates may have been corrupt and decadent scoundrels, but on this matter I trust their OWN WORDS more than your bad revisonist comedy stylings.

I re-subscribed to rradm and saw what I thought at first glace was a big recent North vs. South row, only to look to the right and see that the posts were from last November. Ooops. Sorry I missed the fun.

My bad.

Would it help if I report that in a recent solemn ceremony I blew my Windows partition away from the laptop and am now running psk31 on Mandrake-Linux? Or that I've chosen KPSK 1.0 as my weapon of choice?

<crickets>

Yeah, I know. I'm already in the killfile for tonight's outburst. It's Nicer combination, I am running Mandrake 9.2, with a 2.6.1 kernel and gmfsk-0.6beta2

The beta release of gmfsk does so much more than the older 0.5 version.

At one time I had linpsk running on OpenBSD, so it probably wouldn't be too hard to get running on FreeBSD.   A screenshot is at:

I get it, this is a joke, right? Something like, how do you know you're

I apologize. I recently resubscribed to rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc after many months and loaded up the first several hundred mesages.
Thinking I was on a more active newsgroup I jumped in to this "current" discussion. After making a few blasts, I looked and saw the posts were dated last November, and spanned five groups. My bad. I suspect I'm already in a few killfiles.

You already apologized a while back... That first time worked just fine for me. You know what to do with the rest of them, if they can't take a joke, right?

If anybody else trolls you on it, I'd just ignore them.

Besser Associates is offering their acclaimed "DSP Made Simple for Engineers" class in Phoenix, Arizona on 25-27 February 2004.

This 3-day class is particularly well-suited to those involved in RF and Audio signal processing, and computer programmers, who need to learn the fundamentals of DSP. Details of this course, including target audience, learning objectives, course outline, materials descriptions, and past student comments are appended to this posting as items "A" to "I".

To register, please contact Besser Associates at 650-949-3300. For additional course offerings, please call Besser Associates or visit http://www.bessercourse.com/ to view our public course catalog and current schedule.

------detailed course information follows------

A. BESSER COURSE TITLE:
"DSP Made Simple"; a 3-day tutorial course on digital signal processing (DSP).

B. TARGET AUDIENCE

* The primary audience is practicing RF (and Audio) hardware Engineers and Technicians who need to understand digital signal processing (DSP) because of its ever-increasing role in the processing of real-world signals.

* While DSP Made Simple is not a "programming course", it is particularly well suited for computer programmers because of their increasing need to understand DSP algorithms.

* In general, this course is beneficial to anyone involved in the acquisition, generation, transmission, manipulation, or analysis of signals.

C. WHAT THE STUDENT GAINS FROM THE COURSE:

* The ability to apply DSP techniques to real-world signal processing problems in their work.

* A solid grasp of DSP basics and the ability to move gradually to more sophisticated DSP concepts and applications.

* The ability to speak the language of DSP.

  * The ability to understand written descriptions (articles, application notes, textbooks) of DSP methods used in practice.

To register, please contact Besser Associates at 650-949-3300.
For additional course offerings, please call Besser Associates or visit http://www.bessercourse.com/

E. WHAT THE COURSE DOES NOT COVER:

The DSP Made Simple Course does not cover the hardware architecture of commercial DSP integrated circuits. Likewise, while the course introduces the topic of commercially available DSP design software packages, no computer programming is performed as part of the course.

F. COURSE HANDOUT MATERIAL

The training material comprises 475 pages of class handouts. With the typical lecturer, the student must decide between taking notes, or paying attention to what the lecturer is saying. The training handout solves this "note-taking" dilemma. The DSP Made Simple training material provides a "bulletized" description of each DSP topic in addition to an abundance of diagrams. A textual description summarizing the key DSP concepts are included at the bottom of each handout page.

G. COURSE LECTURER:

RICHARD LYONS is a Consulting Systems Engineer and lecturer with Besser Associates in Mt. View, CA. He has been the Lead Hardware Engineer for numerous multi-million dollar signal processing systems for both the National Security Agency (NSA) and TRW Inc. An experienced lecturer, and instructor at the University of California Santa Cruz Extension, Richard has delivered signal processing seminars and training courses throughout the US and Europe. An Associate Editor for the IEEE Signal Processing Magazine, he has written numerous articles on DSP topics, and authored the best selling textbook "Understanding Digital Signal Processing 2/E" (Prentice-Hall, 2004). Richard is a member of the IEEE, and Eta Kappa Nu the electrical engineering honor society. He can be contacted at: r.lyons@ieee.org.

H. WHAT'S GOOD ABOUT THE COURSE

* Instead of overwhelming the student with complex mathematics, the lecturer uses intuitive explanations and well-chosen examples to develop a fundamental understanding of DSP theory. (A recipe for technical material that's too rich in equations is hard for the beginner to digest.)

* The practical aspects of signal processing techniques are stressed as opposed to mathematically rigorous discussions of discrete system theory. THIS COURSE TEACHES THE STUDENTS HOW TO USE DSP IN THEIR WORK.

* Comprehensive in scope, and gentle in approach, the course gives the student a thorough grasp of the basics and the ability to move on to more sophisticated DSP concepts and applications.

* In addition to covering the key practical aspects of DSP, a collection of tricks-of-the-trade used by DSP professionals, to make their processing more efficient, are introduced throughout the course.

* In terms of DSP training, this course is the beginner's best opportunity to efficiently and thoroughly learn the fundamentals of DSP.

I. QUOTES FROM RECENT STUDENTS:

"Excellent course for engineers wanting to get (an) insight into DSP."
   - George Hughes, Lockheed Martin

"This course takes the mystery out of DSP. Rick has a knack for presenting information in a way that is very logical and easy to understand."
   - Dale Laing, Lockheed Martin

"Lyons presents a very solid engineering perspective of the subject with a minimal, yet sufficient, amount of math."
   - Gene Kozin, Itron Inc.

"Lyons' is an excellent communicator of highly technical material. He uses plenty of real examples to translate theory to something of utility."
   - David Day, Day Test and Measurement Inc.

I am curious about the Internet gateways that can take 44/8 IP traffic and send it across the Internet to another gateway elsewhere in the world to be rebroadcast, to help the 44/8 traffic get to its destination. (I'm not sure how well-connected all 44/8 users are by radio links alone, or how tough long-distance routing is.)

I was wondering: how does a gateway know if/where to forward a given IP packet destined for some remote 44/8 operator? Is there some directory of non-AMPRNet IP addresses of gateways, and which AMPRNet segments they're good for, so that the AMRPNet->Internet gateway can pick a helpful and cooperative Internet->AMRPNet gateway?

Thanks, that's great! I wonder what happened to the gateways@cows.net list. Still, there seems to be a lot of leads suggested on that page.

Point is, we are not a pure democracy where every citizen votes on every law and there are no inalienable rights. The Shiite Muslims want to set up a pure democracy. The US is against it.

You left out one of the definitions which can be described as a pure democracy. From Webster's New Universal Unabridged: "... the supreme power is vested in the people and exercised directly by them ..."
That is the type of democracy that voted for Socrates to drink hemlock, which he did.

The USA is not a democratic republic! That can still lead to abusive government.

The USA is a CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC with the responsibility to govern divided among 3 separate but legally equal branches, executive, legislative, and judicial.

The USA Constitution guarantees the principle that all rights belong to the people and that certain rights are inviolable!

The Democratic Political Party in the USA conveniently forgets that, but the Federal and Supreme Courts remind them as needed!

I suggest we all "block sender" anyone who sends an off topic post and tell

You would end up missing a LOT of posts that way, since many of the people that are replying to those posts don't realize that they've been cross-posted, but normally make good contributions and on-topic posts to the newsgroup.

Try using "Ignore Thread" or "Ignore Conversation" (depending upon your newsreader) and at least you'll usually only have to deal with the first one. In the case of the off-topic "Democracy/Republic" one above, it was pretty obvious.

Hi Michael

Well, When AX25 came out under Linux and even the NOS/KA9Q implementations is was really meant to allow TCP/IP over packet radio.
In its heyday in Australia maybe 10 years ago you could do FTP, SMTP mail transfers and so on. Our local gateway (tunnel to internet) also picked up the NOS newsgroup and allowed users to POP3 get the articles and so on. (This is the protocol most people use nowadays to receive internet email)

It is really only of use to you if other amateurs in your area are running TCP/IP on packet. I am actually playing with the userspace soundmodem driver under Linux. It allows all types of different modulation methods including the Q15X25 2500bps HF/SSB one. It just comes up as another port/interface under Linux. Handy when the amateur I am experimenting with doesnt have a telephone/modem!

I never had a huge problem but make sure that you also build libax25 as well. Lots of its subroutines are used by "tools" and "apps". There is a good chance that either the libax25 that is in the RH distro is out of date or doesnt include the .h headers needed to compile apps and tools.

I am personally very wary of source RPM's and more often build direct from tar.gz source.

Well you answered the call problem lower down with your axports comment and the "call 1 <callsign>" <grin>

Yes I found the AX25-HOWTO pretty limited as well. I can however see where the port number (1 in your case is assigned) in my old KISS setup. There is a command "kissparam" thats sets up the relationship between the linux interface and the portname in /etc/axports. In my later soundmodem setup both the linux interface and axports "port" has the same name. I had thought that "sethdlc" also setup this relationship but havent checked.

> Just one brief example: the AX25-HowTo talks about "insmod"ing modules

You should be able to get around this by the correct setup in /etc/modules.conf. insmod is really only used for manual loading of modules where the dependencies havent been defined in modules.conf. In short when you try to run an AX25 app all the right modules should load in the correct order. Most distros that have AX25 in the kernel already have this setup. I have only needed to use module commands when I totally wrecked modules.conf!

I should mention that if you want to use the kernel soundmodem driver (as distinct from the userspace soundmodem driver) you will need to do a bit of module fiddling. One has to remove the ordinary soundcard drivers (ie to play music) to use it for packet. From memory this driver is also not unloadable so to get your ordinary sound back a cold boot is needed.

I actually stopped using mine as the articles were mainly a lot of recycled you know what. My packet use nowadays is pretty well restricted to file tranfers direct from me to another amatuer.

Cheers Bob VK2YQA

Re Correlation between axports portname and interface name..

I hope I have this right, I kind of just arrived at the notion it may be!

- As mentioned AX25 on Linux is a TCP/IP implementation. TCP/IP is in fact part of the OSI 7 layer model. You can regard the first layer as being physical hardware, the second as one having "hardware addresses", the third having "IP" addressing, the 4th TCP and so on.

- In ethernet networking the physical hardware is pretty obvious, as is the packet world. The hardware addressing layer in the ethernet world is the MAC address of the interface. (HWAddr) See my "ifconfig" dump below. (Its that 00:D0 etc number)

- In the AX25 world for amateurs the hardware address is the callsign plus SSID. eg VK2YQA-3. On my packet box I actually have three packet ports (sm0, 1 & 2) and their associated hardware addresses (VK2YQA-1, VK2YQA-2, VK2YQA-3)

- When you start/setup the hardware interface whether it be a kiss TNC, baycom device or soundcard modem you define the low level interface, the IP address and the hardware address. The hardware address is also visible in /etc/ax25/axports as this contains the lookup table for the "pure/standard" AX25 connect mode port to use. The port name you use for linpac/call is not an IP port.You can think of the "normal" AX25 mode working at the HWAddr layer only and IP sits on top of that. If you want to run IP over AX25 you use the standard internetworking stuff available on the Linux box. You could web browse over AX25 but boy would it be slow!

- And again on my packet box I also have three IP address ranges and subnets for the interfces (44.136.0.1/255.255.255.0, 44.136.0.2/255.255.255.0, 44.136.0.3/255.255.255.0) and the associated names in axports being the same as the low level names (sm0-2). They equally could have been "AFSK1200", "Q15X25" & "AFSK300"

- Different hardware devices have different initial setup. kissattach and kissparams are used for KISS TNCs, sethdlc for baycom and so on. The userspace soundmodem is preconfigured using a confoguration file. Along with defining hardware params like ports and interrupts, these kind of startup the low level linux interface and may or may not contain IP and hardware address/name information. Using "ifconfig" then allows you to specify or re-specify the hwaddr and IP address as needed. It also finally "brings up" or enables the interface. I would guess that if you werent interested in IP you maybe able to leave it unconfigured but be aware of the correlation between the AX25 hardware address (callsign+ssid) in /etc/ax25/axports and the port name/naumber used by linpac etc.

I am prepared to be shot down on this but so far it looks good to me!

Cheers Bob

As of kernel 2.6.0 (actually as of 2.5.something), the kernel soundmodem driver no longer exists.

You should be able to use any terminal program such as the one included with Windows for example. Or go download WinPack. It is still free I believe and is an excellent program to use with TNCs.

The MFJ1270b is known worlwide as being a generic TNC2 clone. As a TNC2 clone, it has more software written for it (free and otherwise) than any other TNC design on the planet. There are literally dozens and dozens of programs that work with the MFJ1270b.

Only a fool would be offended by the fact that some companies charge a reasonable fee for thier software. - Especially when there are dozens and dozens of free alternatives.

> Anyway does anyone know any today soft who work with this thing?

Sure... Dozens and dozens of them. There is not room to list them all here. Also, any terminal program should work. You can even use an old "dumb terminal", if you can find one.

> Why i feel like sucker ?

No need for that at all. You just didn't know how lucky you were in your purchase. The 1270b is a very useful piece of equipment.

Capitalist swine eh?

Get a clue, this modem was based on an old CP/M machine of the last century. What the hell do you want? I bet you paid $5 for it, and now you're complaining that you want it to work like a $25 WiFi card.

> Anyway does anyone know any today soft who work with this thing?

Get AGWPE for Win-Dos or a KISS ROM and hook it to Linux. Then you can relive the 1980's again. But somehow I think this modem is too complex for you. You seem to be non-technical??

You'll see lots of TNC source code start at 0x0100 for development.
The Z-80, and I/O on the TNC-2 were all common to CP/M machines.

I developed C programs on my H-89 for TNC-2 for 10 years. My last project was a port of parts of Xinu on the DRSI TNC-2 modem from my H-89 CP/M machine.

Ah--C/80 from Software Toolworks! I think I paid $20 bucks for it, and sold about $20,000 worth of software using it (non-Ham). Alas, my H-89
CRT blew out before the computer did, so I interfaced a Micromint Apple Sprite Video card (cut off the Apple bus, drilled holes for wires, and superglued it into a rectangular hole made into the H-89 development board), and hooked it up to my TV. 40 characters wasn't the same as 80 though (once you've seen speed and line length, there's no going back :-) The color and sprites were neat though. Finally broke down and bought an IBM clone with a flip-top case, running 4.88 MHz (used that until 1993 when I bought a honkin 66 MHz motherboard!) That's about the time I got into ISDN routers and really started making money...

Hi . I have just buy the 1278b, and the included software is rediculus. Multicom (Dos).
They have a old win version at their site but they sell it !!!!!
A product with no software for today PC's ?
Are these guys for real ?

Anyway does anyone know any today soft who work with this thing?
Why i feel like sucker ?

Most any communications rs232 type software will work with it. Windows has a terminal program that will let you run the TNC. You just won't have all the special hot key commands that are specific to packet. That thing has to be 10 or 15 years old by now. While I can't speak for the whole world, in many areas the packet operation is much a thing of the past except for the DX clusters.

I want to say i love packet and i feel sory to see it dying.
But i believe in it. I believe it still has life.
It can still give services. We need imagination and Speed.
Packet must move on 2 Ghz and more, maby 3 or 4 ,keeping at the same time the today speeds 1200, 9600 as backup.
New rigs, or maby up converters at the first steps must be build.
A packet up there and fast is not the same with wireless today nets.
It will be more free and controlable from the operator.
This is the first class position who belong to packet.
Real time video,voice and data at the same time.
Thats the packet im dreaming :)
Anyway thanks all for your replies.

Hi,

I made a simple PIC-based keypad for the FT-817.

With a 16-buttons keypad it makes you set the frequency, change mode (AM/FM/USB/LSB/CW), VFO (A/B), repeater shift (+/-/simplex) and split.

You can find the project on my website at http://www.qsl.net/it9xxs

The firmware for the PIC is free to any amateur radio operator, for non-commercial purposes only.

Giovanni IT9XXS

It's been a while, for sure! What little I did with CP/M was on a Commodore 128, emulating a Kaypro II. I had a copy of Turbo Pascal that ran on that machine; otherwise I doubt I would have bothered with its CP/M capability.

Long, long ago! - Big floppies! Kind of reminds me of an old girlfriend.

I'm sure he meant the chips the TNC's are built around, not the CP/M OS.
He's probably talking about hardware, not software.

I think the "logic" goes - CP/M used Z80 micros, TNC2 clones used Z80 micros, so TNC2 clones are based on an "old CP/M machine"...

(Ah, those were the days... That was real programming... Whatever happened to 8" floppy disks?)

Have a look at the Baycom website, the soundmodem driver is alive and well, having moved from a driver to userspace (this means it works with a lot more soundcards). I've had the newer version up with many of the recent RedHat versions. As far as soundcards, I'm partial to the ES1371/ES1373 based cards these days...

I just aquired an old PK-232 and decided to try my hand at one of the digital modes. What would be the best software to try? I am almost afraid to ask, after reading the highly threaded post for the MFJ. No, I have no clue as to how it was done in the old days, so don't go after me for that.

Thanks for any responses.

Mike,

Download the demo of Pkterm at http://www.cssincorp.com/pkterm. If you have version 7 firmware or later, it works best.

Mike any of the following will work
(if you have PC or clone)
Packratt 2
Procomm
Winlink2.9
(or in fact any "Terminal" type software will drive it).
Its even used with Commodores like mine. Also linux has their own drivers for the PK's. The Commodore requires a hardware adapter however to change the DC voltages involved from +/- 12 to +/- 5 VDC.

Any general purpose packet program can be used with it. Or just use a simple terminal program - e.g. HyperTerminal if you use 32 bit Windows. Starting with something simple, so you have to learn the TNC commands, is always a good idea.

Two problems you might have -

1. If the PK-232 has previously been used with one of those stupid programs that default to leaving it in host mode, you will need to send it three quick Ctrl+Cs to get it out of host mode. Or disconnect the back-up battery for a while to cause it to reset.

2. If it doesn't have a back-up battery, or it has been reset, then it will need auto-bauding - send it a *

I seem to have the software tamed so that PR basically works, but I get very low and flaky connection quality - tons of RR-/RR+ packets, but few "payload" packets. I think I remember from my earlier packet days that these are reject/acknowledge packets, indicating some sort of misunderstanding between my station and the digi. Next thing I will check at the weekend is the modulation deviation of my Kenwood transceiver. Other than that, is there a document describing the ax25 parameters (Tn, N2, idle, window) and useful values? Again the Ax25-HowTo is very unprecise about those.

Hi Michael

Will be off newsgroups for about a month from tomorrow..

As I recall packet neds a very good signal to noise. I have found that even a S3 copy on 2m FM will be noisy enough for retries. If your RIT works on FM check if you are on the digis exact freq.

The original NOS docs (wherever they may be) had discussions on these parameters I think.

Shortening the max packet length gives better results in flakey conditions because there is less time for the packet to be corrupted in. Ensuring that the TXDelay and TXtail is both long enough and short enough is also important. I remember setting my TXD by changing the number dynamically as a ping job was in progress, then adding about 10% when errors occurred. My old IC2A use to run at around 30mS but an older relay based XTAL clunker needed 400mS. If you think it maybe a problem (and remember that the time also helpds the other guys squelch open) set it to something ridiculous like 1 second and see if the throughput improves.

The other timers (and persist/slottime) are more of use in crowded channels so initially it probably isnt worth fiddling with. As a general rule of thumb you would use what the local group are using so you had a fair chance as them. Biggest problem is to ensure that you can hear every other TX on your channel and they can hear you. Not a good idea to use a yagi and low power because your (and their) collision rate will skyrocket, despite any settings you use.

I'd accept the default settings as they appear in the proc filesystem, set TXD and TXT by experiment, use the persist/slot that the local group uses (or leave it as default), MaxFrame/window at 1 and thats it. If you specifically want to use point to point with another station, make persist/slot more agressive, fine tune the TXD, Maxframe/window to 7 and make the packet length as long as possible.

I thought the howto actually described the params well enough for me..

Cheers Bob VK2YQA

You should get many answers, but I loved Xpware when I was doing amtor and pactor. I don't do it any more, so I have not stayed up with these things. Do a Google search on Xpware.

I have had the best luck with the program Winpack. Get the latest version. It doesn't do fax or navtex (as far as I know) but for packet or pactor it is hard to beat. You can set up scripts that you can run to set parameters on the pk232 to different values depending on what you are doing. If you change between vhf packet and hf pactor, you can set up a couple of script files to do the changes for you (e.e. changing baud from 300 to 1200, etc.)

Packet is not dead in USA...
HF Packet is alive and regrowing...

Its is only cleaned its self up of the massive overload it once suffered from.. its like the local repeaters.. There to use and not nearly as crowded.

I agree... No longer the FAD...
But the internet is not as reliable... Nor as cheap...
When you can have a packet station for as little as $100-150 complete.. A opne time outlay.
And you pay $20/mo for internet where do u get idea that its cheaper..?

HF forwarding still requires a GOOD TNC...

Yes the Packet Users and VHF UHF forwarding can be done on a Soundcard just fine..

Howdy,

PSKFest was certainly fun. It seemed many on the mode were unaware it was happening.

Hope someone can help me out with this one. I have an Acoustic Solutions SP110 DAB tuner as part of my hi-fi set-up and I want to record from channels (such as the BBC stations) that can't be recorded from the internet. I looked into the Xitel PC to hi-fi link, but this seems unnecessarily expensive since I don't want to connect my whole hi-fi system, just the digital radio. The radio does have an optical line-out. Anyone have any ideas?

This is a ham radio newsgroup. Try uk.rec.audio or alt.radio.digital.

James V. DeLong, Washington DC based Lawyer, and Director of the Center for the Study of Digital Property.

"Linux" (the OS) is about 1% of what you get in any Linux distribution. The kernel of Microsoft Windows has evolved to the same code. That is, Windows started out as a nonthreaded, non-preemptive, single user, multi-tasking OS, where today, its kernel is pretty much indistinquishable in function from 70's Unix or 90's Linux. OS is OS.

As a software developer, your choice today is not about Open Source, or Market Based software, it is about earning a high salary. Think of an open-end wrench sold by Sears.

Whether or not this open-end wrench is the product of Open Source forge, or a Market Based forge, is of no consequence. The person who gets the wrench (tool) is able to earn a high salary manipulating the tool for his/her customers.

Take a database engine, for example: MySQL. Here we have a tool that is basically free (as is the open-end wrench), and the person who uses the tool is able to maintain a high salary. That same person could have chosen a different database engine, for example: Oracle. In that case, the high salary is dependant on a higher total cost, and customers preference.

For example, it would be missing the market to deliver MySQL to a shop of Oracle developers, just as it would be missing the market to deliver a base-10 open-end wrench to a base-12 shop of mechanics.

... which would have been a relavant reply if Mr. DeLong had said "virtually irrelevant to an investment-centered economy." as a description of Linux.

What he actually said was:

--------- quote ---
"The open source theorists know perfectly well that the model might translate to academia, but not beyond that. In fact, they have another model in mind, which is to make content free, tax the hardware industry, and then distribute the revenues to the creative community according to some complicated government-run formula. (See the work of the Berkman Center, or the Electronic Frontier Foundation.) To even think about this produces a shudder, given the government's unblemished and bipartisan record of pork, politics, and destruction in every industry it touches. (Think schools, energy, telecom.) It is also not even open source, particularly; it is just socialization of the creative sector.

The big question is, Why would anyone want to go down this road? As noted before in these pages, the concept that "price should equal marginal cost even when that is zero" is a product of an artificial logic from which all the reality has been stripped, and is virtually irrelevant to an investment-centered economy. "

---------- unquote ---------------------------------

He commented on the socialization of the creative sector, not directly about Linux OS, as your confused and confusing reply - implies.

I don't think he even mentioned Linux, but you did in the subject title.

The lawyers argument is merely that he believes there is a thing called Intellectual Property (IP), and that it is worth billions in his industry.

What he's talking about is bigger than Linux. IP includes such things as a car with a red exterior and a brown interior, and if you are the first to select these colors, than Solicitors can bring you money. God help you if you put golden arches or the Olympic rings on there as well...

Thats just a bunch of classic FUD, he's a funny guy.
He's wrong in so many places that I won't waste my time trying to point them out. I'm busy shipping a fix to a GPL'ed library and a GPL'ed application so I'd say the model is working fine.

Is he blind or just pro microsoft ?
The site is full of microsoft ads, go figure.
I know it hurts that microsoft is being killed in the server market, he even tries to write down the numbers.
Fortunately, the facts are available elsewhere:

Ham radio used to be about helping others, build things, experiment, cooperate and kindly assist the beginner. Thats just what the open source is about, create and share to to let everyone improve.

Log into your router ( most likely you can do this from a browser window = by typing in 192.168.0.1 )=20
You should see Dlink the 704 web config page.
Go to the bottom of the page and click on advanced.
You will then see the Virtual Server menu page.
Go to the bottom of the page and click on Special AP You should be on the Special Applications page , enter 5200 in the = window that says Trigger Enter in the window that says Incoming Ports 5198-5199
Check the Enable box.
MAKE SURE you also open the drop down box  that says ID and enter 1 ( or =

Log off and this should do it.
Good luck.

I'm finishing up an article for a ham publication, concerning a packet radio type device.

Basically it is a vocoder (DVSI AMBE) and data modem using the CML RD-LAP protocol chip. I've built four of these gadgets, and they are quite a bit of fun at 9600 bps into my Yaesu rigs.

Basically every time you key-up to talk, the first thing it does is transmit your GPS information (lat/lon/heading/speed/altitude), and your callsign, which shows up in the other persons LCD panel.

I plan a general data capability further down the road.

There's no 9600 bps digital repeaters in town here, and I was wondering if someone makes a 9600 bps repeater controller board? I know TAPR used to make a 9600 bps digital repeater board, but I don't think the FIFO chip is available anymore to make it functional?? It's also a pretty old design.

Any hints on something that is being marketed today?

AT AB6USA they have our packet BBS on vhf and Pactor on HF for mars traffic. We also have a digipeater up on the MT behind ab6usa call sign "MARS" which is a good path to AB6USA, but something in either the pk232 settings or the winlink settings refuses "connects" via MARS. Does anyone know of either a AX25-2 protocol param, or a winlink2.9 param setting that will refuse any attempts to connect via a digipeater. Direct connects to ab6usa only will work but some of our mars stations cant reach ab6usa direct and they try connect via mars but ab6usa pbbs just will not accept the connect. Its not due to lack of a good signal path, its something in the settings or params that is preventing this.

They still have this page up, but I don't know what the kit status is:

http://www.tapr.org/tapr/html/F9600.html

According to their pricing, the modem board is $80, the clock board is $5 and the bit regen is $10 plus $7 ship & handling.

I couldn't find anything else with a few different Google searches.

www.des.com.au have a kit that allows you to do something like what you want for use with a Parallel Port check it out at http://www.dse.com.au/cgi-bin/dse.storefront/3fe9625f07302d4e273fc0a87f9c06a1/Product/View/K2805

or www.altronics.com.au have alternative one like http://www.altronics.com.au/cat.asp?cat=11&grp=424&id=K2852
http://www.altronics.com.au/cat.asp?cat=11&grp=424&id=K2850

Both of these companies are decent Australian Electronic retailers that I deal with alot. I have never used either of these kits, but have always wan't to have a reason to do so.

Hope this is of some help.

Excepting _all_ Yaesu non-HF transceivers. Yaesu does not support CAT on any

Hi,

Does anyone have info on the ICS AMT-13 AMTOR/RTTY terminal unit made in the early 1990's? I have the command set and software for it but need the pinouts for the radio port. A copy of the manual would be excellent, any reasonable copying/postage expenses paid.

The one "place" I know is 7037 kHz. There has got to be something up on 20 meters as well but I've only had skeds on pactor there (that's during 2003). If you want to try a sked then just mail me and we'll try it out.

Anyone using Linrad?

I am having freeze problems and want to get a feeling for its general stability.

I get the impression it may be a mouse/svgalib problem but any comments welcome!

Cheers Bob VK2YQA

To whom it shall concern:

I am interested in finding out what upgrades were/are available for the KAM. I am well aware of Kantronics' arogant position of not supporting the hardware anymore which is part of my station.

I would like to find out:

(a) what is the last firmware revision that came out for the orignal KAM
(b) What hardware upgrades (clocks, memory, etc.) were available for the KAM?
(c) What is a working KAM worth these days?

Can chips and upgrades be done with parts that were once sold as kits by Kantronics? I think there was a memory and cmos upgrade, no?

Now for the rant on Kantronics about their terrible treatment of KAM Owners:

I understand that they may not wish to provide technical assistance via the phone or email, but not posting the last eprom version for it, or the manuals is in the view I have, no less than deplorable.

Since principles are cheap, and TNCs are expensive, I will never purchase another TNC from Kantronics, and that is a shame as I feel they make the best hardware to do the job.

Now I am sure they dont care about a single amatuer operator, given that they for sure make money in their commercial division, but I care because it is my money!!

So who makes a very high-tech TNC that is very programmable and has a support program I can count on well into the future (unlike Kantronics).

What have other people's experiences been with support for very olde hardware from other manufacturers? Do they abandon their customers like Kantronics does and if not, whom is good in that area?

All of them quit supporting the hardware and software once the model is out of production. A few of them will support it for a few years afterwards but not many and not for long. The KAMPLUS is really quite old as far as computer hardware goes. While I don't know when they went out of production, the one that I own is 10 years old.

Ok Stuart heres the skinney!
I have the KAM+ with ROM 7 in it. ROM 7 was the first that supports PACTOR. Then it went on to ROM 8.(something or other) and added MBX capability. I bought mine used and got all the cables and a rs232c adapter which converts the port voltages from +/- 12vdc to +/- 5vdc for Commodore computers use. I hope this is of some help to you.

Hams abandoned Kantronics long before Kantronics abandoned the hams. Cheap hams decided that sound card software was better than a box, and that caused so many company's, like AEA, to go out of business.

You'll never see another ham based TNC, since hams think that poorly written soundcard software that is free is better than an external box with it's own processing.

Morons.

Ref TNC's vs Soundcard stuff. Many seem to have forgotten that none of the soundcard stuff is actually CRC (cyclic redundancy Checksum). Or "ARQ" automatic error correction. This is a prime necessity for digital msg traffic. So a msg originated by someone can be guaranteed it will arrive at destination error free no matter how many gateways or bbs it passes through enroute to destination.

Them KPC4's were a bargain at �30 considering the price I paid for my two some 10 Years or so ago.

Just goes to show how times change.

I think I will hang onto my remaining KPC4 as it might be worth more to a museum or something.

True, I paid over 300 quid for my first PK232MBX, but at the time I could easily get 10 connections into my station at once.. but packet has gone the way of CB, 70cms, etc etc.. i.e dead!

I would not say that it is dead ....
just no longer the flavour of the month / year.
most folks have gone on the internet - a lot faster !!
I did run 9k6 tcp/ip and AX25@ 9k6 but when you could get the same sort of thing on the internet (DX cluster etc) at a high speed, more reliable and the equipment was comparatively cheaper than the radio, TNC, 9k6 modem.
And who needs a TNC now ? software for sound cards will do it and most have or can find a 486 to run the stuff on.
Still I though �25 was about the right value to ask. Looks like Dave will be getting his TNC back then.

Yes the KPC'3 were / are a bargain if you want them !!

cheer for your thoughts Martin

I think the TNCs are better than the soundcards and software, atleast that's my opinion. I wish I could get the latest update proms, version 8.2 for the KPC3. Seems Kantronics quit selling this version about two weeks after I picked one up at a hamfest and were unwilling to sell me the proms. They told me to pitch it and buy the new KPC3+. I don't want to do that as the KPC3 with the version 8.2 proms will do what I want it for. I think they made/make a quality product but their support, lately really sucks, I hate to give in and buy the KPC3+ but if I can't find the version 8.2 proms, I probably will.

It depends on what you are wanting to do...

My soundcard setup lets me switch from 1.2kb afsk packet to 2.4 or 4.8kb afsk, or 9.6kb fsk, or even Q15x25 mode for HF, all in a few seconds. If a new mode comes out this week, I get to try it out - this week. I can also use the same soundcard interface to do SSTV , RTTY, PSK31, MFSK, etc. and so on. There is no TNC in a box that can offer that - unless it has a soundcard packet interface.

On the other hand, soundcard packet is no good to use for for a packet node. Only a TNC can handle that. Also, you can turn off your computer and a regular TNC in a box will still accept connections and accept mail. No soundcard program will do that!

Fact is that both do things the other won't do. Rather than limit myself to one tool or the other by worrrying which is "best", I just go ahead and use both of them.

They are both the best!

FIrst of all determine if your router is the problem. I'm not sure which model DI-704 you have, but the method is the same for all models. FOr the DI-704 goto page 17 in the manual and setup the computer you use for Echo Link as the DMZ host. Warning: do thid fo testing only and restore it to normal when you are finished, this exposes your computer to the Internet WITHOUT firewall protection. IF after you try this you can connect on ECHO link then you will have to set up port forwarding for Ports 5198 and 5199 for UDP traffic only. Info for doing this is on Page 14 of your manual.

Also check to make sure that the WInXP firewall (a useless bit of code) is disabled.

Goto Start--> Control Panel--> Network Connections. Right click on the LAN connection for your computer ans select Properties form the menu. Click on the Advanced tab and make sure the check box in front of "Protect my computer and network by limiting or preneting access to this computer from the Internet." Then click OK

Hope it helps :)

G'day,

a few years ago I used to run my Baycom PR modem with DOS which was pretty easy, all I needed was tfpcr and GraphicPacket.

Now that I am a Linux convert I thought it should be nearly equally easy to get on the air, considering AX.25 is already included in the kernel.
So what do I need? Not really being proficient with the technical details, I figured all I need is to compile the ax25 and baycom modules, and install a (console) terminal on my system.
The box is an old but trusty 386/25, 16MB RAM with RedHat 6.2 and a 2.2.25 kernel. Although it takes almost half a day to compile the kernel, I still like to give the machine a useful application near the end of it's service life :-)

After reading all the HowTos and hints I could find on the net, I compiled the ax25-libs and linpac and tried to start the application.
This is where trouble begins. I get an error with sethdlc:

#sethdlc -p -i bc0 mode "ser12*" io 0x3f8 irq 4
sethdlc: Error No such device (19), cannot ioctl SIOCGIFFLAGS bc0

I don't really know what I am doing here, since the AX25-Howto seems to take knowledge about the intrinsics for granted and the sethdlc man page also didn't get me any further.
Shouldn't I find the bc[0-3] devices in /dev? There is nothing. There is also nothing in /proc/sys/net/ax25.
Also, the compiled baycom modules are called baycom_ser_hdx and baycom_ser_fdx, not baycom as mentioned in the AX25-HowTo. How to diagnose the error and requirements?
This is all very confusing, and the fact that most of the documentation I could find is outdated, some of it written for 2.0.x kernels adds to this confusion.

I know that in times of mobile phones and the internet PR is basically dead, but I'm still hoping to find a kind soul to lend me a hand and explain what I need to do to get it working...

Michael

With the newer drivers, the device is called bcfs0, etc. See /usr/src/linux/Documentation/networking/baycom.txt (at least that is where the file is for 2.4 kernels) for updated documentation.

Take a look at <http://radio.linux.org.au> which has a pretty good listing of what is available, with links to the actual sites.

Michael,

I use a program called linkt. it will work fine with a port like ax0. I'm not sure how it will work with your setup.

I use an mfj tnc in kiss mode and run a program called kissattach (comes with SUSE linux) to provide the ax0 port to the computer. I don't know if your baycom is capable of kiss mode.

Good luck with your endeavors to get this going. While packet seems to be mostly dead in my part of the country, there are a few die-hards using it for comm support in emergency situations.

In the interest of accuracy, I'll have to correct Tim's characterization of packet users in the US as "a few die-hards", as if packet had been replaced by something better and only a few weirdos would still bother with it in these modern times.

The fact is that nothing either better or worse has come along to replace packet radio, and there are thousands of enthusiastic packet users in the US today, with more hams becoming involved (or re-involved) with packet every day.

Packet operation in the US is growing very fast right now, with old networks being refurbished or upgraded, and new ones showing up where none have been before. One packet net in the northeastern US has installed over 140 nodes in the last five years or so, another packet net started more or less from scratch a few years ago and now covers an entire state. Another new packet net in the central US is just getting started.

There has been an upsurge in interest in emergency digital communications since the terrorist attacks, partly because of interest generated by federal grant money that is available for some of these efforts, but the renewed growth and interest we are seeing in packet today pre-dates the terrorist attacks by several years. Hams across the US have been dusting off their TNC's, or getting on the air with the new TNC's and the soundcard packet stuff in ever greater numbers for several years now, and the trend has been speeding up, not slowing down.

Tell us about your network!

Hi Michael

I think that linpac has to run as root. Pls dont quote me on this because I didnt try to research it, only tried it succesfuly when it didnt work as a std user. Something about direct access to the interface...

If you just want to test the TX operation trying pinging a host in the same subnet as to what you setup. The AX25 stack creates an interface in s similar manner as a ppp (dial-in) or ethernet and you can pass IP traffic over it. (same subnet means, if you setup the ip address as 44.136.0.1 and the netmask of 255.255.255.0 then just trying "ping -c 1 44.136.0.2" from a console window - you can check the ip address/netmask by "ifconfig" as root)

I think that the ax25tools also came with "call", a simple packet pgm. Simply do a "call bcsf0 <callsign>" in a console window. Its pretty clunky but it will prove or disprove the AX25 stack. (verify the name of the interface by running as root, "ifconfig" or looking at /etc/ax25/axports. I can never remember which one has the port name!)

BTW Linpac has the hooks to receive broadcast mail direct from your local BBS. Give me a shout if you want to set that up as there is another package you need.

Cheers Bob VK2YQA

That was my impression,  Even though the '88 used the Z80, it uses a different Serial/IO chip which is incompatible with the TNC2 firmware.

Timewave doesn't show a manual available on their webpage, but does say to contact them for anything not listed, so they may offer a copy.

http://hamradiomanuals.com does list a copy of the PK-88 manual for $18.
I found this after a better Google search.

Thanks for the tips.

You have no clue what I think. Which simply shows that you are not paying much attention to Ham Radio.

Perhaps you could attempt to answer my simple question, or is that too hard for you?

What you are trying to say, is that there is nothing new. It's not really a question, it is an indictment. One of your continuing themes in this group has been that you know what is good for everyone, and that your "religion" is the correct one, and everyone else is going to "hell".

IRLP is nothing more than a solution to a need, that gives people an added joy to their hobby. Like packet radio, it will probably be fun for a few years, and then people will drop it and go off to something that is more fun/different.

A good friend of mine used to say "I don't build repeaters anymore, because it attracts the wrong people to the hobby." Packet radio is the same problem. The people it attracts don't even care to adjust their hardware.

IRLP will attract the wrong people to the hobby, and the people who built it will go off and start a new project.

It's nothing to get upset over.

You keep forgetting Gene that some hams actually do care about the hobby.
You can try to project your hostile, anti-ham attitude upon other hams, but fortunately most hams are better people than you are, and the anti-ham attitude just doesn't stick.

"International Radio Loophole"??
I have been a ham since sophomore year of high school (68) years now and I dont get into this newsgroup too often.   In fact dont get on the Ham Bands very often either as all my time as a MARS volunteer keeps me too busy.   Being Hi State Coordinator for ARMY MARS is totally time consumeing.   So now I have posted at least one msg to this group, albeit time is a waseting and I got a stack of EMAIL to be handled to Schoffield Barracks.

Assuming you want to know what IRLP is (you never actually asked it in your message, only in the subject), it stands for Internet Radio Linking Project. It allows repeaters around the world to be linked via the internet. If you do an internet search for IRLP, you will undoubtedly find loads of stuff on it.

You wouldn't know a ham at a convention of hams. You are probably the biggest asshole on Earth, and I've never ever heard one ham say anything nice about you. Why is that?

I'm about as anti-ham as Hiram Maxim was (a real ham, who would be rolling over in his grave at what the ARRL is doing in his name). Real hams aren't sheep. You're sheep.

Andy
Is that ILRP related in any way to ECHO/LINK?  I have used that several times since there is a 2meter rptr about 2 blocks from my QTH.   Talked to ARCTIC CIRCLE/Germany/England etc with about 5 watts output from my Azden rig.

Gene,

Do you have any idea why the name calling by this fellow? Most HAMs I know are considerate of others opinions or at least will discuss with a civil tone but Charlesb seems to be ignorant when it comes to discussing ideas.
What's his problem?

Just like leased phone line linked receivers / transmitters way back in the early 1950s. Like I said ... what's new here?

Sure, so what?

Who's upset? I'm not.

Real hams answer simple question asked by other hams.

IRLP is linking repeaters via commercial carriers.
Been done for at least 50 years, no big deal.

Oh ... yeah ... 50 years ago what was linked were not called "repeaters" ... but anyone who knows the history of ham radio is aware of that detail.

>Is that ILRP related in any way to ECHO/LINK?

IRLP links repeaters via the internet. This allows local repeater users to talk to repeater users from around the world from their HT, mobile and base radios.

Echolink allows hams use their computers to talk on repeaters around the world.
No radio required.

I suspect either a chemical imbalance in the brain, or substance abuse. He's chosen a fringe part of the hobby and built a box that he can't get out of. So when people walk by the box he can either scream for help, or make mouse like noises to try and scare them. So far he's not asked for help. He's the "director" after all, and couldn't ask for help now, because he is too important.

There's been a couple new developments since the 50's. The first is virtually free VOIP (Voice over IP) vocoders and the Internet. Combining these two into a peer to peer network of voice repeaters while functionally similar to things done in the past, is technically a new development. It's not just plug and play, someone had to develop the software/hardware solution.

I don't understand your fixation with "real hams." I guess if I did, I'd be as mentally ill as you are.

P.S. this forum doesn't require FCC ID. If you want to know my callsign, look it up in qrz.com. Even a moron could work his way out of that paper bag.

While possible, that's not the main purpose. Echolink was developed because IRLP is designed to be a closed system. The Echolink people wanted a system that allowed any ham to register and link their radio.

both are related in the fact that they each use VOIP to link repeaters over the internet.

IRLP requires an actual radio link to the "input" repeater, while EchoLink allows for hams to connect to a repeater using a radio or directly over the internet using the microphone on their computer.

I do not consider the use of either system as working "DX", but rather as alternate methods of linking repeaters together, or a different means of remote operation in the case of EchoLink.

Why is there so much hostility towards IRLP?

I realize that it's not real DX, but isn't amateur radio and the Internet partly about connecting people? Why is there so much hostility towards exploring radio-related technology like IRLP (which is also a part of ham radio)?

Personally, I find the whole concept facinating. I'm also looking at the IPARN (http://www.iparn.ca/) (Inter-provincial Amateur Radio Network) who's goal is to connect repeaters in every Canadian province via Satellite (due to funding shortfalls, they're utilizing an IRLP-like system utilizing the internet).

I guess I just see it all as exploring technology and the Amateur Radio portion creates unique opportunities to expand that exploration.

It's because there are so many hams who are too intelligent to go for Gene's alleged "reasoning" in this matter.

They see the damage it does to the hobby and unlike Gene, they care.

I'm interested in controlling my station via an RS232 bus and am in the market for "relay boards." IE, send RS232 commands and open and close relays (or TTL outputs). Also want some inputs to send alarms (like high SWR) back. I searched on the net and found that numerous companies make "me-too" relay boards. They tend to all be 8 relays and 4 inputs for about $100. If you want 16 relays, you buy two of these for $100 each. Actually, I'd rather have all TTL outputs and no relays, but I haven't found any boards like that.

I'm wondering if anyone has had good or bad feedback about vendors of these things. Also, would appreciate hearing about any cheaper solutions than $10 per I/O pin. Any sources of preprogrammed PIC or similar ucontrollers I can use to make my own? It would seem that one PIC chip could replace one of these relay boards (assuming I don't need relays). Unfortunately, I don't have time to become a PIC programmer.

What damage? If anything it will maybe help save the hobby which is little, by little dying. If the hobby doesn't modernize and change then it will die. Young people don't see or care for CW, but with computers, they do see a way to communicate and are trying to bring people into the modern era of ham radio. It's the old timers that keep resisting change that are going to kill the hobby and if they keep bashing the younger people that are finding new ways to communicate via computer/radio, they will leave and the FCC will continue to take the frequencies that ham radio uses away since they are not being used, mainly VHF & UHF.

James

The purists are out against anything that intermingles and supplements amateur RADIO communications with commercial RADIO and NON RADIO networks no matter how much it enhances the end product of VHF/UHF Amateur Radio.

If you can talk from here to there on VHF using neat tricks why bother taking tests to get on HF ?

IRLP and Echolink are Amateur Radio blasphemy to the puritans.

To me, its all neat stuff.. even the HF. Part of being interested in overall communications technology rather than a narrow sampling of what is available. To each his own.

Really?
Perhaps you have not been reading what folks have written.
In any case, tell us all about that enhancement.
How many new licensees has IRLP brought into the hobby?
What bands and modes do they use?
Same questions for EchoLink.
Where did you get your data?

Ah. You do understand a little bit.

The proper term is "stupidity and ignorance."

<snippety>

I'm not hostile to it. Quite the contrary, I see it as a valuable tool for linking repeaters where regular RF-type links are not practical.

It's a part of it, but it's not really 'radio-related' because it depends on the Internet (read: wirelines) for connectivity. The closest it comes to being radio-related is that some Internet links go over microwave or satellite relays, and it's still the same TCP/IP protocols.

Indeed it does. Good to see that someone's not deathly afraid that it'll corrupt the hobby.

You've been telling us for a week that "real" hams don't use VOIP, and "real" hams don't use the networking, so I don't see how this can be considered a partial quote.

Simple, you failed to quote the whole article.

Bet you are a CBer, here to bug the hams, just like 10 and 12 meters.

WinWarbler is a free Windows application that supports multi-channel PSK31 and PSK63 via PC soundcard, as well as RTTY via soundcard and/or an external modem (e.g. KAM, PK-232). Soundcard PSK is accomplished using Moe AE4JY's PSKCORE engine, and soundcard RTTY is accomplished using Mako JE3HHT's MMTTY engine.

WinWarbler is a member of the DXLab Suite; it can be run independently, but when other DXLab applications are running, WinWarbler will automatically interoperate with them:

- Commander: provides transceiver control for most Elecraft, FlexRadio, Icom, Kenwood, TenTec, and Yaesu transceivers

- DXKeeper: provides full-function logging, progress reporting, duplicate-checking, and QSL management (independently tracks each QSO's confirmation by paper, eQSL.cc, and LotW)

- DXView: displays a live world map bearing station locations, the solar terminator, and beam heading (controls most PC-connected rotators)

- SpotCollector: captures, announces, and analyzes DX and WWV spots from up to 4 telnet clusters, the DX Summit web cluster, and a local packet cluster

- PropView: generates graphical propagation forecasts (using the included IONCAP engine) and monitors IARU/NCDXF HF propagation beacons

- Pathfinder: provides instant access to more than 100 web-accessible sources of QSL route information

- Launcher: initiates or terminates a specified set of DXLab applications with a single click

WinWarbler is under continuous development; during the last year, there were 81 releases bearing 119 enhancements, many suggested by the user community. Given this rate of evolution, I do not post "new release available" messages on reflectors other than DXLab. Its been awhile since the last announcement here, so I thought I'd summarize the major improvements:

1. up to 32 general purpose macros can be defined, plus a macro that is executed on entry to PSK and a macro that is executed on entry to RTTY

2. many new macro operators have been defined, including a "Last QSO" macro that automatically extracts the appropriate information from the DXKeeper log.

3. PSK63 support

4. rapid switching between PSK and RTTY

5. one-click Main window MMTTY profile selection (standard RTTY, fluttered signals, multipath, etc)

6. one-click upload to eQSL.cc

7. broadband decoding

When broadband decoding is enabled, WinWarbler deploys 47 "monitor channels" across the current PSK band. Each monitor channel continuously seeks to lock onto a PSK transmission within its range. Text decoded from locked channels can be continuously displayed in a Monitor Channel window, an example of which may be found in http://www.qsl.net/winwarbler/ChannelMonitor.jpg . As you can see, WinWarbler automatically extracts callsigns from the decoded text. A smaller Station's Heard window shows you who's on the band: http://www.qsl.net/winwarbler/Heard.jpg . Double-clicking on an entry in either the Channel Monitor or Heard windows will preload WinWarbler's current receive pane with all monitored information and will initialize the transmit and receive frequencies for an instant call. The parameters that control broadband decoding are all available for tweaking and experimentation.

Enabling broadband decoding does significantly increase the load on your CPU; a 400mhz Pentium is probably the minimum for this mode of operation.

WinWarbler and all other DXLab applications are available via http://www.qsl.net/dxlab/. You can review the online help for any DXLab application without first installing the software.

Development of these applications is continuous and user-driven; if you'd like to participate, you are welcome to join the Yahoo DXLabs group via http://www.qsl.net/dxlab/reflector.htm .

>> In any case, tell us all about that enhancement.

In my neighborhood it allows the snowbirds who migrate every winter southwest to communicate daily with their familes back in the Poconos when HF conditions suck.

The National Weather Service Forecast Office that serves my area is approx 100 miles from my QTH.
They run Skywarn nets on a Long Island, NY VHF repeater that I can not get into via radio due to terrain up in my parts. Echolink is the only way I can get into these nets.

The Mount Holly, NJ NWS Forecast Office also uses echolink to run nets into areas that they serve that can not be reached using VHF repeaters.

I seriously doubt Echolink would be reliable during a real weather emergency like a hurricane.

Same answers for Echolink.

My data in general ? From a legacy mainframe running db2 and QMF version 7.1. I'm an SQL coder in real life.

My ham radio data.. well that is from actual real time observations.

If you equate good things for amateur radio = more new licenses you are never going to be a happy guy.

My nephew in his late teens is into music, hot rodding cars, and computers. no interest in radio.

I recently gave a ham radio pitch to a troop of Boy Scouts at our Emergency Management Office.

I'd say about 10 percent had a minor interest in the radios. 1 percent were real hot about ham radio.

The many flavours of OFDM are, by definition, spread spectrum.

(Please leave me out of the rest of the argument - all of these topics seem to get way out of hand and far too personal!)

They're fairly common now. My wife's work laptop has no serial port, just USB, Ethernet, monitor output, and some weird DIN-like thing that isn't a mouse or KB port.

A SoundBlaster card probably will be good enough, unless you really have to have studio-quality sound.

If you want better sound, look into the Turtle Beach audio gear for PeeCees. It's pretty high grade stuff, and you will pay for it.

I am trying to use a KAM XL with my MobilePro MP780 handheld PC ("HPC") running Microsoft Terminal under Windows CE 2.11. Both devices are DCE and I am using a null modem cable.

The HPC freezes up as soon as I power up on the KAM XL and will not unfreeze until I power the KAM XL down or disconnect the devices.

The same arrangement works OK with a KAM98.

Kantronics says both TNC's manage their RS-232 computer port the same way.   I know that this is incorrect because my breakout box shows two different dances with the two different modems -- but nothing I can interpret.

Anyone else encounter this lock-up situation and find a fix? Any suggestions?

My work laptop has similar ports, but the docking station comes with a serial port, so there's one in the footwell of my car for when I want to use xastir in the car.

Cuando hablamos sobre sistema GSM si, es codificado y la decodificaci�n no tan f�cil y se necesitan un equipamiento caro parar escuchar.
Cuando las autoridades desean escuchar o rastrear un tel�fono m�vil se hacen en conexi�n con las centrales de hardware y software.
En general una sistema ciento por ciento seguro de intercepci�n no existe solo es una cosa de esfuerza!

Just connect the line level output of any scanner (usually can use headphone jack as well) or shortwave reciever to the recording input of your soundcard.

You may have to wire the cable going between the radio device and the soundcard, OR use an adapter depending what radio you are recieving with.

Then, merely use some type of recording program like Soundforge, Cooledit or similar to record into a .WAV file which will allow you edit the file, getting rid of any extra junk and most decent audio programs like mentioned, will have a way to save to a MP3 file. If not, there are MP3 conversion programs like CDEX that will convert WAV files to MP3 files.

If it's a fairly new laptop, the port is most likely S-Video out so you can play DVDs through a cable to your TV.

A new version of APRSPoint is available. It incorporates a lot of new changes and enhancements and works with both MapPoint 2002 and 2004. MapPoint 2004 was just released by Microsoft and is available as part of the package. It contains lots of new additional map data for North America and Europe. You are welcome to visit http://www.aprspoint.com/ for details. Thanks.

No.

Basically you need an OFDM modem (TAPR DSP would probably work) and you would have to write the software for whatever DSP or FPGA you choose. Project 1: Develop a 36 tone OFDM modem.

Then you need a vocoder. The AOR operates at 2400 bps, and the AMBE vocoder sounds great. If you could make anything that did 2400 bps, up to about 3600 bps in a soundcard vocoder, then you have a winner. Project 2: Develop a 2400 bps vocoder that sounds great.

Hi,

I am currently implementing a TNC following the specs in the v2.2 AX.25 protocol. Platform: An ATmega32 microcontroller. Will be a neat, little package when I'm done.

Anyway, as I am rather tired now and the AX.25 paper appears to have no other answer than "impossible" to my problem, I have a question for this forum:

What if I wish to put a seven character callsign in the address field? True, seven octets are reserved for each callsign, but one of these is for the SSID. Can it be done?

What happens if I extend the source address field to eight octets?

Dependent on the TNC at the receiving end?

Will the last character simply be discarded?

Will the frame get rejected as not correctly formatted?

This problem is not hypothetical. The target application is a picosatellite which has been assigned (Tentatively, at least) a seven-character call.

Perhaps I'd better spend my time talking the post- and telecom authority into giving us a six-letter call, rather than trying to work my way around a protocol limitation... :-)

-I was thinking of doing it like this - just curious as to if it was possible to put a longer call into an address field. Working packet abroad, for instance - RA3A/LB1LF will hardly fit into six octets... :-)

The tactical address, btw, is NCUBE-1, assigned call is LA1CUBE.
(See www.rocketrange.no/ncube if interested - unfortunately, there is not much information on the amateur payload. In short, the secondary objective of the satellite will be 9k6 digipeating. Depending on how much memory is available after all the programming is done, perhaps limited store-and-forward capability will be added as well.

Thanks for your input. Hopefully AMSAT will respond to my enquiry as well. There are quite a few details to work out if one wishes to do it all by the book. :-)

That's probably an S-Video port, for use in playing DVDs and such out to a TV set.

This is assuming you can find a TNC that supports direct connection to the PC with a USB cable. I have yet to find one. Better to use the USB-to-serial cables with the appropriate drivers.

> Then again, I've never heard of a computer without a serial port. That is a bit strange.

Forgive my bluntness, but get used to it. ;-) RS-232 and parallel ports are considered "legacy ports" by today's standards. More and more computers are starting to appear on the market that don't even have PS/2 ports for keyboards and mice, expecting the purchaser to use either a port replicator for that purpose -- port reps are available that either hard-dock to the computer or use a USB port themselves to connect to the PC -- or to use USB-based mice and keyboards (or mice/keyboards that are wireless and working with a USB-based IR or RF transceiver).

I understand that Windows XP is even moving away from supporting legacy ports. The current version does not natively support parallel-port interrupts, from what I've read -- it has to slow way down to support printing directly through the parallel port -- but hasn't gone so far as to dump RS-232 support (fortunately). There will be more and more movement away from traditional serial/parallel port support and towards USB and FireWire connections.

We just had a couple of Inspiron 5100 notebooks from Dell come in at work to be configured before sending them out to some of our field staff. No PS/2 port, no serial or parallel ports, just VGA and USB. Nice machines, though! I'm thinking very seriously about picking one up myself!

CQ Magazine's October issue started a series of articles on digital sound recording. Part III came out in December's issue. Not sure how many future parts there are, but it's worth reading.

As Mike mentioned, use your sound card for the audio input. You can use the Sound Recorder application that comes as a part of Windows to do your recording, or you can find some other programs that give you a little more versatility. I've been playing with GoldWave, which does a fair job. CoolEdit2000 is another good one, although I think they've been bought by Adobe.

The procedure I use is:

1) Feed the audio from the receiver into the Line In port on the computer's sound card;
2) Hook the speakers up to the output of the sound card;
3) Start GoldWave, and make sure it is configured to accept input from the Line-In connection (by default it isn't); 4) Start a new file in GoldWave, specifying the length of the file in minutes and seconds;

5) Click the Record button.

When it's done, I save it to disk as a .WAV file (which is what GoldWave defaults to), then I use the XP Plus! pack utility to convert the file from .WAV to .WMA format. The .WMA format provides a LOT of compression, moreso even than MP3. A 25Mb .WAV file recording of a shortwave broadcast last night compressed down to about 700K in .WMA format! (An MP3 file would be about double that size, but still far smaller than the .WAV file originally was.) look on the Byacom website... One of their members has built just such a device although the ax25 stack runs on the host. Much of the low level packet work is, however, handled in the modem. Hardware design is very interesting, it consists of a 8051 derivative processor that has built in USB hardware and a programmable gate array that implements the modem. The logic in the gate array is specific to the job at hand (i.e. the logic that is downloaded into the FPGA for 1200 baud operation differs from that used to implement 9600 baud).

BayCom makes a very impressive USB packet radio TNC. That's the only one I

Does anyone know if the 12 pin (I think it was 12 pins or more) thats on the back of the IC751 rigs is that still available at have one they will sell me? I dont want to setup a box that works

Mouser carries this part.

24 circuit plug Molex .062 Connect

Mouser Part Nbr 538-03-06-2242

You will also need to order .062 pins to use with the molex plug.

You don't need to carry much current so get the pins for the smallest wire, they will be a little cheaper.

Recently I have heard references from multiple sources about 9.6kb PSK activity on HF bands.

What's the deal on this? Is it a wide, multi-stream mode like Q15x25 mode?

It sounds illegal, but lots of things sound illegal if you are not familiar with the facts. That's me... I am not knowlegable about PSK packet. I do have a "flexible" modem though, that will allow me to operate PSK packet at a variety of baud rates... Isn't 1200 baud the limit on 10 meters, and 300 baud lower down?

Somebody straighten me out on this, please... I'm cornfused.

I assume this refers to 9600 bit/s.

A 9600 bit/s QPSK signal fits nicely within the same bandwidth occupied by an AM phone transmission, with 8PSK (or 8QAM) the signal would fit into the bandwidth of SSB phone transmissions. If the bandwidth limit allows AM or SSB, then what is the problem with other modes with similar bandwidths ?

That is a purely US specific issue.

Anyway, 1200 baud or 1200 symbols/s is quite capable of transmitting 9600 bit/s provided that the SNR is good. It requires that 8 bits are transmitted within each symbol, i.e. each symbol can have 256 distinct states. While 256PSK would hardly be practical, 256QAM might work with high SNR and low phase distortion line of sight paths.

256QAM requires that the receiver must be able to detect more than 20 distinct states in both I and Q direction, thus quite small errors will spoil the reception. However 64QAM (6 bits/symbol) are widely used in Europe on the COFDM subcarriers used in digital television.

Well except that for standard PSK enthusiasts tout it's exceptionally narrow bandwidth thus allowing more conversations in a given space than even CW.
What point is there in creating a wide digital mode?

This is a common misconception about baud and bits. You are correct about the baud rate limitations, although the baud rate is what is known legaly as the symbol rate.

Suppose I design a modem that operates at 50 baud (20 ms symbol rate), obviously I can use this below 10 meters. Now, let's say I modulate that rate with 36 carriers of DQPSK. That is, there are 36 carriers of four phases (two bits per carrier), or 72 bits in 20 ms (50 baud). There's fifty 20 ms periods in a second, so we have (72 bits x 50), or 3600 bps.

Now obviously we have learned something in the last 20 years, and that is, that HF is a bad medium, and you can either retry your transmissions until the band quits, or you can insert some sort of error correction into the transmission, to prevent retransmission. So let's say we limit the information to 2400 bps and insert 1200 bps of error correction (FEC), for a total of 3600 bps.

Suppose each of the 36 carriers is a multiple of 62.5 Hz, then we can say that 62.5 x 36 is 2250 Hz. But we don't really want to go all the way down to 0 Hz, so let's say we start at 312 Hz (62.5 x 5) and this will push the right side out to (62.5 x (5 + 35)) or 2500 Hz.

In summary, 36 carriers takes a lot of bandwidth, but no more than a standard analog sideband. The fact that you can fit 2400 bps voice, data, and image into the channel might be worth the complexity.

P.S. I just described the G4GUO modem :-)

Single channel PSK has nothing in common with high bandwidth information transport. What one group touts may be exactly opposite of what another group touts. Sometimes 31 bps at 31 baud is good enough, other times 3600 bps at 50 baud is what is needed.

The point in creating a wide digital mode, is to increase throughput per second.

does anyone on here remember the Kantronics with V7 or higher rom chip.
Does it support PACTOR (I think it does). I have one in a box but never used yet.   Since I am using the old Commodore 128 machine, I also bought the "CBM" converter plug that converts the RS232 user port (aka epp) port in PC parlance to +/-5V instead of the straight thru PC voltages of +/- 12VDC.
I seem to remember something about a trace in side on the kantronics board that must be sliced open for some reason. Does anyone know why that was necessary for C128 useage or not?

More throughput, error correction for 100% copy, ability to transfer binary files. (Q15x25 guys like to send JPEG's back 'n forth, kind of like SSTV, except the pics come through 100% good.)

Obviously any wide mode is overkill for keyboard QSO's, but there's a whole world of other things that hams want or need to do, and some of them require more bandwidth.

There are a lot of pro's and cons related to utilizing the wide modes for any purpose. I don't think we will have to worry about them becoming so popular that they will squeeze out everybody else.

I have two RTTY terminal unit boxes that I would like someone else to have.

1) Flesher TU-170 with manual. This one I have never used. It looks clean but has been modified with a toggle switch on the top which says "TAPE XMIT ON/OF"

2) Kantronics "The Interface" which I purchased in the mid 1980's and used with an old Teletype model 15?   It includes a computer card for the Comodore VIC-20 computer.
I haven't tryed it in years and I no longer have the Teletype or the computer.

Either or both of these can be had for the cost of postage.

Where are the Q15x25 QSOs going on. I have MixW, which should work this mode, but I am not aware of ever hearing it on the HF bands. Is this a VHF/UHF only mode?

It's intended for HF, but works great on VHF/UHF too. Operating freqs listed in the pages that follow.

http://home.att.net/~ronchap/q15x25modes/q15x25.htm

http://sharon.pi8zaa.ampr.org/mirrors/zl1bpu/Q15X25/Q15X25.html

There is also a Yahoo group named "Q15x25" that is a great source of info on operating this digital mode.

Briefly: Q15x25 uses 15 PSK streams at 88.xxx baud each, theoretically giving you around 2500 baud. That's where the 15 and 25 in the name come from. It butts right up against the legal limits of bandwidth, but doesn't cross those limits and is so it legal, despite doubts that some have expressed in the past.

Q15x25 operates exactly like packet. It's a connected mode, and if a frame gets through at all, it gets through intact. From what I can tell, the most popular activity among Q15x25 enthusiasts is to swap JPEG images on the air, kind of like SSTV but with error-correction so the pics always come through clean.

There are versions for Linux and Winders.

My on the air experience with Q15x25 is that it works great when you have clear spectrum, but under noisy conditions is no better or worse than 300 baud packet! - Except of course it takes up several times as much spectrum to do so. Q15x25 will not pull out weak signals you can't hear or any of that kind of stuff. On the other hand, under decent operating conditions it can be pretty fast.

I also have discovered that by boosting the TXD up to 800-1000 MS or more, you can conduct Q15x25 QSO's over a normal VHF voice repeater. A nice 2500 baud data transfer system for emergency use anywhere there is a voice repeater... Admittedly not ideal, but still a big step up from nothing.

I remember reading a few weeks back that the author/authors of Q15x25 were currently working on a new version, so it appears the mode is alive and well, if not popular due to it's width. It really is hard to find a good place to operate Q15x25 on busy freqs.

That's the problem with the wide modes, I guess.   TANSTAAFL

Greetings,

I am looking at putting up a standalone APRS weather unit, and would like to hear from anyone who has done this successfully.

This will be at a remote location, where it will be a major pain in the rear to do a reset, so reliability will be a top priority.

We will have access to 110v at the location, but since it is out in the boonies it is susceptible to brief outages.

The equipment that I have looked at is the Peet Bros 2k and 2100, which advertises APRS compatibility out of the box. Is anyone actually using one ?

If we go with Peet Bros, which TNC has worked for you ?

And this is a standalone, dedicated operation for APRS, is one of the low cost MFJ packet radios suitable for this environemnt ? Are they durable enough ?

Any other radio suggestions ?

Thanks for your opinions...

Watt

Jim,

As fate would have it, the August issue is the only one this year that I don't have.

I looked at the ARRL website to see if their articles are online, and this one is not available online.

Any chance you can email me a jpg, bmp or gif copy ? Thanks !

Dear Judges, Lawyers, Policemen, Guards, Counselors, Taxpayers, et. al.,

We are here. Like it or not, for good or bad, we are here. Who are we? We are the downtrodden and dispossesed, the self-torturing, the disenfranchised convicts, drug and alcohol addicts, the unemployed and unemployable. We are the children of poverty, financial and spiritual. We have and will have children of our own, grandchildren too. We are ex-cons, uninsured, homeless, of many colors and speaking many tongues. We are the enemy in what has become a domestic war against ourselves.

And who are you? You who like the tough talk of Tough on Crime? You who watch as budgets are cut in education and health care while you militarize a police force? Bullet-proof vests, automatic weapons, helicopters, tanks, robots ... the testosterone is oozing through the streets, more prisons, longer sentences, tighten the belt, spartan conditions, task forces, gang units, gun courts. And what is there to show for it? Unemployent stays low because half the population oversees those "out of the workforce", the dregs, the rabble, the enemy? Please tell me there is a deeper reason. Do you feel safer? More humane? More like a cohesive society with a shared sense of purpose, who can identify Us and Them? Do you live in a gated community or gentrified neighborhood? By the way, have you read the Declaration of Independence and US Constitution - or do you only know the first phrases?

It's about time we got together. Please know that I have yet to meet a convict who wants their child to be a thief, an addict, a dealer, a prostitute, or a violent individual. Most of us still have hope for ourselves even when stuck in the darkest dilemmas, ruts and catch-22s. Most of us believe in crafting laws and instilling order. Many of us have burrowed beneath the surface to find a spiritual sense of being, an understanding force at least as powerful as those we succumbed to, and many of use wouldn't escape if you opened the front door. Did you know that approximately 10 million Americans are either incarcerated, on probation, on parole or once were in those categories? Each of those 10 million have families, friends, neighbors ... and so closer and closer does the We interface with the You. Don't you think it's time we talked?

Are you ready? Can you accept that the road we are travelling points toward a grim and painful future? Do you have the heart to face monumental failures while bravely struggling beyond where we are now? I know that some of you are, and that some of us are, and this is what gives me hope. You need our insights just as we need your structure. It is never over, especially when a real solution, a real treatment for our sickness, is yet to begin.

In Solidarity,

Frequently Asked Questions about Usenet

Subject: Introduction.

This document discusses some questions and topics that occur repeatedly on Usenet. They frequently are submitted by new users, and result in many followups, sometimes swamping groups for weeks. The purpose of this note is to head off these annoying events by answering some questions and warning about the inevitable consequence of asking others. If you don't like these answers, let the poster of thie article know.

Note that some newsgroups have their own special "Frequent Questions & Answers" posting. You should read a group for a while before posting any questions, because the answers may already be present. Comp.unix.questions and comp.unix.internals are examples -- Steve Hayman regularly posts an article that answers common questions, including some of the ones asked here.

This list is often referred to as FAQ -- the Frequently Asked Questions. If you are a new user of the Usenet and don't find an answer to

I thought it was that poor confused geek who spams me about RadioMirror

Old 386, but runs great. I used it in my trailer for logging and packet.
Has windows 3.11 and DOS 6.11. Has glidepoint 'touch mouse' pad, and a fair amount of software installed. Comes with nice padded case.
Internal floppy drive. All works great, except the battery (of course).

Thanks for looking!

Greetings

My name is Larry and my callsign is ve3fxq.
I have a problem. Though I have been licenced since 1964, I feel like the perferbial newbie. I have been away from amateur radio from around the mid 90's until now. I got my hf and vhf equipment reconnected this summer and found radio activity far lower than when I left it in mid 90's.
Now I am retired and need a shot in the arm with some insight with the new technology.
I am now reading about a stardard called 802....
What is it.

I am also hearing the people are using 2.5 ghz and 5.0 ghz
I am not sure where to begin asking questions so... does anyone know of a website that can educate me on this new 802 standard and how that frequency is gotten to.
I hate to say this but   etc, etc.

Well, 802.11 is the standard used for WiFi, or wireless networking cards you can purchase for your home computers. Many people have found that with amplifiers (even to the legal limit) covers quite a distance. Nothing to do with Ham radio though, except that WiFi is co-mingled partially with one of the U.S. ham bands at 2 GHz and 5 GHz.

Hams are dying now by the droves, and the modes and skills of operators is drastically changing. No longer are the skills of building a rig from scratch what drives new hams. They mostly want to communicate, and not be here just for the electronics.

What attracts them away from using just the Internet and WiFi for

I wouldn't be quite that strong. Yes, a lot of hams are older, but we are adding new hams at a slightly higher rate than we are killing off old ones. And the new folks, while different, are engaged in the wide range of facets of this hobby that we all are.

We do have a huge number of techs, who are pretty much relegated to VHF. A surprising number of these folks are getting engaged in Amateur Radio Public Service activities. Perhaps not as many as we might like are upgrading, but emergency communications is probably 90% or better VHF, so for what drives these folks, their tech license is all they need.

We are also seeing a renaissance of sorts of building, both kit and homebrew. There are probably more kit manufacturers out there than ever, and the quality of these kits is astonishing. Most are far better than Heathkit ever dreamed of, and some even have construction manuals that put

Heath to shame. Nowadays, even the smallest club can put together very high quality kits. Take a peek at what the North Georgia QRP Club is doing, or the Flying Pigs. For the top of the line commercial kit, take a look at http://www.elecraft.com. There are very few already built rigs that can hold a candle to the K2, and they are all a LOT more expensive.

Homebrewing has been spurred by the Internet, which gets homebrewers together on forums like this one and QRP-L, and has made parts more accessible as well. Subscribe to QRP-L, or just graze the archives (http://qrp.lehigh.edu/lists/qrp-l/) and the number of homebrewers gathering there is astonishing. Wander on over to http://www.qrparci.org/links.html and follow some of the links to the various clubs ... most of which have some sort of kitting projects, or to the dozens commercial outfits offering kits and supplies. Take a look at http://www.amqrp.org for some pretty high tech kits and projects. AmQRP has a magazine, the Homebrewer, which is strictly about homebrewing, and Sprat, QQ, and several others are heavily homebrew.

Amateur radio is changing, and maybe it's not always changing in the ways that make us comfortable, but it certainly isn't all doom and gloom. And for those of us that like to melt solder, we have a lot more company than we did 10 years ago.

More specifically: The current standards are 802.11b and 802.11g. In terms of security, wireless networking is iffy at best. WEP can be cracked in a matter of hours.

Excuse me?! Speak for yourself! I've always been in it for the fun and learning of messing with the guts of the radios and associated goodies themselves. In fact, I went and made RF services part of my side business, dedicated heavily to hams who want to use commercial hardware (mostly Motorola) on the ham bands, but who may lack the skill or equipment to get such working on them.

I will say that there's a -lot- more "appliance operators" on the air, but the techies among us are still around. You just have to look a little longer and harder to find them.

I have the following that I would like to trade:

1. FT-50 with couple battery packs, speaker mike, 12 car adaptor and charger.
2. MFJ 1278B Multimode TNC
3. Rigblaster with rj45 mike connector
4. MFJ 1116 power strip.

All are in great working condition, with a few scratches...

Will trade as lot or individually. I am looking for 2m mobile radio, auto antenna tuner, screwdriver antenna controller, qrp ssb radio (like the MFJ radio's), GPS for APRS, or make an offer. Please email directly to theplanters95@aol.com

A Soundblaster card will capture the audio well eough for all but studio-quality work, which amateur radio certainly isn't.

As for conversion to MP3, that involves a sound editor or similar program, either to capture it as MP3 initially, or to convert it from some other format (e.g., .wav) to .mp3.

Just about ANY card is fine - even no card at all, as practically all motherboards manufactured in the last few years have perfectly adequate sound built right in. The only reason I can think of for buying an add on sound card is if you are into SERIOUS hi-fi or use a pc to create music.

We have been running a community receiver for the 136KHz band for a couple of years in the UK.

A number of amateurs had trouble with noise on the band (TV, a data ciruit into a hospital and a mobile phone base-station with faulty SM PSUs just to name three).

We have a receiver located in a quite part of Crawley (at our radio club station), and this relays the whole of the 136Khz band on 2m (135.4KHz = 144.9854MHz)

This is done with an FT-847 running in satellite mode with the two IFs linked together. We get quite good coverage over the SE, and good dynamic range.
We are proposing as an experiment to try relaying

a 6KHz segment of the CW segment of 40m band for a few weeks to get a better feel on the dynamic range issues.

The system is MB7LF and is licienced as a data system.

You could just drop the packets that aren't addressed to the receiver at some point.
Typically after the monitor part of the code. You want to be able to see the traffic, and log the users, etc, but not pass to the higher code levels the data not addressed to you.

22 echoirlp nodes installed by ian g0hlj

hi all

so far ian g0hlj has installed 22 echoirlp nodes they are all working fine

there has been no new irlp installs required due to a bad echoirlp install by ian adding echolink adds over 2,000 nodes/repeaters to your irlp box which are located in many other parts of the world not covered by irlp

the installation is easy and takes about 15 mins

if requested your irlp node can be backed up first echoirlp can be uninstalled or disabled if required

it is important though that as always if you are not sure what you are doing please ask ian to change anything echoirlp works great and i would hope to see every irlp node have echolink added as always if you have any questions please feel free to ask them we welcome any questions here and all questions will be answered and treated with respect ian would be happy to inatall an echolink irlp node for you please pass this information on

Paying for the software generally works pretty well. The author will then help you to "hack" it to a registered version.

TrueTTY Versions History

V2.30
"State" and "IOTA" fields was added to catch-word popup menu.
"State", "Grid" and "IOTA" options was added to "Setup / Text / Use "Other" field as" menu.
TrueTTY can send information about used mode to logger now.
See "Setup / Other / Send Mode to logger when mode was changed" ,

"Setup / Other / Send mode ... as ..." options.
V2.26
Fast squelch in AX25 mode was made.
V2.25
AFC has two parameters now.
The first parameter is local deviation in hertzs, i.e. maximal deviation from current frequency. Second parameter is global deviation in hertzs, i.e. maximal deviation from last user-selected frequency. User-selected frequencies are shown at spectrogram or waterfall by short thin lines.
V2.24
MultiFSK decoder was improved.
V2.23
AX25 decoder was rewritten.
Noise-immunity was great improved in HF-PACKET and slightly improved in UHF-PACKET.
V2.22
BPSK31 and QPSK31 decoders were rewritten.
QPSK31 decoding quality was vastly improved.
V2.21
AMTOR-FEC (SITOR-B, NAVTEX) decoder was rewritten.
Decoding quality was notably improved.
V2.20
User can select optimal or wide filters via "Filters" menu in RTTY and Problem solved: The KAM XL does not energize any RS-232 pins on power up. This befuddles the HPC. Moreover, the HPC energizes DCD when it opens its serial port, but DCD is not carried in a null modem cable -- so the KAM XL doesn't see DCD from the HPC. I wired a custom null modem cable with DCD carried straight through. This works OK.

Can anyone recommend a good sound card DTMF program? The ones I have been able to find seem to be either badly overpriced, or abandoned shareware.

Greetings

I feel rather awkward in asking this question because while I was an active amateur ve3fxq I seem to know what was going on and, sometimes, was knee deep in it. Now I feel like I am the odd man out.

I seemed to have dropped out of amateur radio during the mid to late 90's. That is about the time that APRS was starting to make it presence know.

I was actively involved in a display station ve3cne at the Canadian National Exhibition. That station was closed around 1998ish and my contact with amateur radio seem to go with it.

My main question is where is APRS now? When I saw it last, at ve3cne, There was an almost world wide use of APRS with, even truckers having nodes and letting people watch them travers the country. There were pictures of storms and you could watch them treck across the country.

Also I am recently heard of another mode where you can connect to appropriately connected vioce repeaters around the world via the internet.
I saw an article about this but it seemed like you needed fairly suffistocated equipment to get there.

Any information?

Greetings again

Maybe I am just not reading the instructions correctly but do you need a special board pluged into your computer to simply listen to a repeater on the network?

The main thing Larry, is that you have to have a special lack of intelligence that allows you to get on the Internet and call it "Ham Radio" just because some moron has hooked his radio up to the Internet.

I really do get a kick out of those who think that
NOT using radio is somehow progress in the USE of radio!

The display of ignorance is quite amazing.

As ornery as Charles' reply was (yes, it could have been phrased much better) he does have one valid point: 'Internet' and 'Ham Radio' are two entirely different mediums. Always have been, always will be.

IRLP, as I see it, is just a way to get repeater linking done independent of the restrictions of site-based link transceivers. After all, the 'L' in IRLP does stand for 'Linking.'

In short: IRLP has its uses, but it will never replace true radio work.

My feeling is that "hams" who feel that using radio is a "restriction" should consider moving on to another hobby.

I've done a bit of research over the past year.
Notes are in a folder in the left-hand desk drawer.
If you want to see them you have to come visit.

Pretty simple to check the callsigns (where the poster actually admits to having a callsign) against databases like the DX spotting networks. To date there has been one hit. I know it sound silly, but of those folks who seem to think "not using radio" is some kind of advancement of the art of "using radio" ... only one actually seems to have ever used radio in the past year. Imagine my surprise.

No, I didn't bother to check license databases or qrz.com or whatever to check whether the callsigns used by those posting "anti-ham-radio" posts were actually licensed.

No, I will not divulge the callsign of the European ham who showed up in the DX spotting network (JA database) :-)

Tell you what, Charles. When you come up with a method for making a link transceiver pair operate reliably, over a single hop, from, say, Seattle, Washington to Pensacola, Florida, you go ahead and let us all know, OK? Heck, QST will probably be clamoring for the article on it. ;-)

As for moving on... Naaah. I've been part of the ham radio scene since 1977. I'm having a blast with it, and I'm not about to stop any time soon.

There's balance to be found in everything. IRLP has its place, as does Echolink, but they will never replace radio as a communications medium. They are merely new tools to increase the usability of the radio medium.

Methinks a couple of passages from 'The Amateur's Code' are appropriate here.

-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-

The Amateur is Progressive

Keeping their station abreast of science.
It is well-built and efficient, and ALL operating practice is above reproach.

The Amateur is Friendly

Slow and patient sending when requested, friendly advice and counsel to the beginner, kindly assistance, co-operation and consideration for the interests of others; these are marks of the amateur spirit.

Maybe you should have asked me what "restrictions" I was talking about before making snap assumptions, hmmmm? ;-)

IRLP is radio hooked to a network. It's the future of public service and emergency communications. There is no radio manufacturer in the commercial world who doesn't believe in network radio linking. Hams should get onboard rather than fight it. This is the 21st Century.

What's a DX spotting network? I don't do contests, so I'm kind of ignorant about being a paper hanger.

DX spotting networks are via packet radio or over the internet with telnet. Hams around the world report other DX stations freq, mode, etc. Used to spot rare DX or during contests

I never said I was fighting it. Heck, I'll probably IRLP-link my own repeater, once I get it set up. All I'm saying is that IRLP is simply another tool in the amateur's metaphorical toolbox, and not something to be feared or hated (as some obviously do).

Yeah, riiiight. They really proved EchoLink and IRLP's worth during the northeast blackout a month or so back. First, the non-ham stuff became grossly overcongested because they had idiots trying to "help" from all over the planet at once. Then, they both simply shut down as Internet access went away. - Leaving hams using ham radio to handle the emergency when the non-ham stuff went belly-up, as usual.

The loss of Internet access would have shut them down, but it was too late... They had already shut themselves down through overcongestion before it had a chance to.

"Future of public service and emergency communications"... Haw hawr! Good one, Gene!

Unlike yourself, of course.

I predict that in 2004, a manufacturer will produce a ham radio that has a built-in network Wi-Fi and that's how you will control the radio, and pass audio to it. It will either be a proprietary application, or you will use a Netmeeting type of vocoder software.

That's going a little too far. I would never buy such a device.

Hi everyone.

A friend recently purchased a used PK-88 and I've been trying to find at least a current command reference for him. If anyone might have scanned this portion of the manual and would be willing to share, that'd be great.
 Or, if there is a URL I could find in Google, I'd appreciate that as well.

Thanks!

As in most new developments there are some who cling to the old true and tried way...you know the biggest obstacle to progress is resistance to change. It's not just in basic things but it's true in science as well as just trying to get an employee to do a task in a production area different than the way he has been doing it for years.

Now, you argue that using echolink is not using HAM radio...I beg to differ. Just this morning while sitting at my computer I had a little rag chew with one gentlemen in Tucson who was walking around with his HT...was he using HAM radio....was I using HAM radio....was it pure HAM radio....the answer to the first two questions is yes and the answer to the last is NO. It was a marriage of HAM radio with the net. My opinion is that we will see much more progress in this area.

I guess another question to you is when I use one of those silver box sets from Kenwood, which has the circuits of the transceiver built into the silver box but no external controls....I have to use the computer to control the silver box...is that HAM radio?

Kinda -- but you still have to break the pileup -- and the pileup is almost instantaneous when the spot hits the reporting networks. with hundreds or thousands calling.

The purist abhors the spotting networks -- tunes and searches on his/her own. May take years to achieve DXCC Honor roll this way -- but many have done it.  Sure helps to have a full legal limit amp and a 100 foot tower loaded with stacked long john beams.

But if DX spotting networks are cheating -- what about the DX Nets which spoon feed the hungry crowd ??

Ah DX IS !!!

And what about football -- where some spotter in the stands -- reports a weak spot in the other teams line ????

Depends a lot on the version of firmware in the box otherwise its exactly like any other licensed TAPR TNC-2 clone.

The main software difference in the clones was some had "personal mailbox" extensions. Each brand with a personal mailbox did it differently.

TAPR will sell a version 1.1.9 EPROM and manual to you for $15 + $6 shipping. http://www.tapr.org/

That was the PK-87. The PK-88 is not compatible with TNC-2 firmware. Timewave may be able to furnish a manual.

Good idea.
Use 13 cm. for the control link.

Oh wait, people are already doing that on many different VHF / UHF / SHF bands.

Nothing to see here, move along.

You, like many if not most of the IRLP appologists miss the point.

As with the digital networks, once you start rely on the crutch of a commercial service to carry your "Ham Radio" communications, slowly but certainly the Ham Radio portion will disappear.

> Now, you argue that using echolink is not using HAM radio...I beg to differ.

Beg all you like, you are still wrong.

The point was not "Are you using Ham Radio?" but rather "Did you require the use of a commercial service to carry your communication?"

According to the latest TAPR "Packet Status Register", thier quarterly newsletter, the folks at TAPR have discovered that they are adrift, with no purpose and direction to guide their activities. As is often the case, the "leadership" at TAPR were the last ones to acknowlege a situation that hams have been noticing and remarking upon for over a decade.

It appears the TAPR BoD put their heads together, discussed the question thoroughly, and discovered that they still had no idea as to what TAPR is supposed to be doing. At last they threw up thier hands and hired somebody to investigate - To try to determine what TAPR might be good for.

"Uh, TAPR does technical stuff." was the conclusion the investigator returned.

It is revealing that during the entire article describing the confusion and debate as to what TAPR might be good for and the "answer" thier investigator eventually turned up, the words "packet radio" were never even mentioned.

That's right; At no time did anybody in the TAPR organization or the investigator they hired mention the words "packet radio" while working to sovle the mystery as to what TAPR might be good for. Those words also are lacking in the investigator's conclusion, "Uh, TAPR does technical stuff."

- So why do some people think of TAPR as a packet radio organization?
TAPR doesn't.

"Some people" will always live in the past.

Could be they (TAPR) don't want to limit themselves to a technology that is now fully obsolete, and 90% of Hams have abandoned.

Personally, I don't care about packet (ax.25), and "digital" to me means vocoders, PSK, and OFDM. ax.25 would be the "misc" of this "digital" forum.

I also don't need your sniveling about your most hated organization. Get over it.

Even wireless devices have abandoned Spread Spectrum, and gone for OFDM for speed (802.11g).

AOR has an OFDM modem for HF that does 2400 baud with 1200 baud of FEC.
Why would anyone use packet anymore?

TAPR has been doing a good job in the last couple years with kits. The DSP-10 is a MAJOR undertaking, and they did great with it. The DSPx and KDSP10 are also very nice - I've been playing around with them the last few days. I've had a T238 for quite a while, and it's perfect.

So, I'm MORE than happy with them as a kit vendor. When it comes to general packet radio, then, no, I don't look to them as a leader.

Has anyone produced a lower cost alternative to the AOR ARD9800? We have a small interest group here in Indianapolis but the $500 investment is too steep to allow us to get started. I have found references to some kit, prototype and/or sound card alternatives but I have not been able to locate any actual devices. suggestions for alternative solutions (protocols) would also be welcomed. We want to be able to implement the solution with both FM and SSB equipment.

Hi,

I just started with MixW 2 with my Yaesu FT-920. I have connected the FT-920 with the serial cable to my computer. When trying to transmit, I can only transmit in LSB mode.
In MixW I changed the settings in "Configure" -> "TRCVR & CAT/PTT" to USB, but this doesn't help.

Does anybody know how to solve this problem?

73's, Tom

Yes, TAPR has been good about the kits and technical articles for some time, but they are not really a packet radio organization as their name and web-site implies.

The popular conception that TAPR is a packet radio organization is incorrect. TAPR has no interest in packet radio and does not support it. Many of the movers 'n shakers involved in TAPR despise packet radio in fact, and several are downright rude to hams who express an interest in it. The fact that TAPR marketed the TNC2 kit long ago has nothing to do with what they are now.

I think we can safely allow Gene Story to be the TAPR poster-child with his response here, displaying the sort of attitude about packet radio that you can expect to find within TAPR.

USPacket.Net is a genuine packet radio organization, dedicated to that aspect of the hobby. We do not feel that it is necessary to run down other aspects of amateur radio, in order to promote packet. Naturally, we at USPN would not want hams to mistakenly go to TAPR for packet information, only to be discouraged or derided by TAPR folk who share many opinions with our poster-boy Gene, here.

It would be just as inappropriate for hams to go to USPN looking for kits or highly technical articles, as we do not offer any. What we do offer is support and usable, useful information for hams who are interested in amateur packet radio and most especially packet radio networking in the USA.

Gene Story accused me of "hating" TAPR in his nastygram-post, but my feelings about TAPR do not run that strongly. As a technical organization that puts out kits, TAPR does a great job. What I do "hate" though, is to see hams being confused into thinking that TAPR is a packet radio organization when they are not.

Personally, I applaud TAPR's reassessment of itself. It is accurate, and now only a name change is needed in order to reduce any remaining confusion as to what TAPR is, and what it does for the hobby.

You would never know it by looking through their website.  I see packet radio all over the place.  I have always considered TAPR to be the "father" of today's TNC's.

Hello...I'm trying out the new AOR ARD9800 modem and wonder if there's anyone out there I could set up a sked with, perhaps on 20 meters. I understand from one web search that one digital voice calling frequency is 14.320. Regardless, if anyone is similarly equipped, please drop me an email at N2RLL@aol.com.
Thank you,
Harold

TAPR kitted the TNC2, twenty years ago. Things have changed since then, and it has turned around to where hardly anybody at TAPR wants anything to do with amateur packet radio, and most especially not with packet radio networking. Packet figured large in TAPR's beginnings, but things change and it is no longer the central focus of interest for that organization that it once was.

The "packet radio" stuff in TAPR's name and on their web-site reflect an earlier era in TAPR's history that is long past. It's a millstone around their necks, contributing to their present internal confusion and lack of focus. A lot of the unseemly and un-ham-like nastiness toward other hams (packet enthusiasts) from TAPR folks springs from this dichotomy. This is not doing TAPR any good, and of course it is bad for the hobby as well.

If TAPR dropped the "packet" stuff altogether and concentrated on what they do best, both TAPR and the packet radio enthusiasts in the U.S. would be a lot better off.

No. You missed the whole point of my well worded position (and at your age, we can allow for wet pants and confusion).  Let me repeat, the thing that is fully obsolete is ax.25 and the forms of FSK used to carry it.

All that anti-ham drivel you were spouting?

>(and at your

Well now, let's just take a look at what's actually going on... There are two major AX25 networks that cover the entire east coast of the US, going from 200 miles to 1500 miles inland, owned operated and enjoyed by thousands of hams every day, who use those networks to save lives and properties every year.... And then there are the AX25 ARRL skipnets on HF that tie together different sections of the country via amateur radio, along with overseas links of course, and the hundreds of smaller VHF/UHF packet nets scattered around the country, and the new ARES packet radio nets that are popping up here and there, partially funded by the dept. of homeland security....

And then there's uh, uh.... Oh, I forgot what it was that you were saying had "obsoleted" amateur packet radio? Where is your ham radio alternative, and how many hams use it every day?

What is obsolete is your nasty anti-ham attitude. Packet Radio is doing just fine, thank you, growing and advancing every day, saving property and lives.

You have nothing to show because you are just another miserable anti-ham troll, infesting a newsgroup for ham radio operators. You are real good at running down what other people do and accomplish, but have nothing to show for yourself. Lacking any accomplishment to show, and also lacking in character, your response is to run down the accomplishments of other, better hams.

- If you are a ham at all, that is. I don't remember seeing a callsign in your post which says a lot about you, right off the bat. Your ignorant, nasty, lying attitude does not lead me to believe that you are a ham either. If you are a ham, then you shouldn't be.

Please excuse me, once again I have erred in the eyes of a 6 Lander by placing truth in front of political correctness.

It might interest you to know that after the surrender of Lee, Lincoln requested the White house band to play Dixie.

I am always amazed how enlightened liberals can reduce a complex war to a single issue. If you choose to do so, make sure it is the correct single answer. The war of  Northern aggression was about money, slavery did not have a damn thing to do with it.

Lincoln's emancipation proclamation had no standing in a seceded South and was made in the hopes that it would foment an uprising of the slaves, thus requiring the use of Southern troops for quelling the uprising rather than fighting the Northern troops.

But Ed, let me not confuse you with the facts.

Oh my, tarred as a "6-Lander"! How cutting! And quaint, since the "6" designation is a result of a Federal bureau licensing organizational plan, and you Southern boys are always so distrustful of Federal schemes. Looks like them Washington boys are already inside your head.

Playing "Dixie" might have been a diplomatic gesture of kindness; it also might be viewed as the ultimate "screw you".

Slavery was the basis of the South's wealth, the ultimate cheap labor. Claiming that money was the true basis for the US Civil War is like trying to link the Holocaust to the cost of soap in Bavaria. And the South didn't want to simply continue slavery, they wanted to allow it to be expanded to new states as they joined the Union. Slavery wasn't the single issue, but it was the ultimate trigger to a train of events that had been being avoided for 30 years. If slavery wasn't the prime issue, then why wasn't the Civil War fought between the Union and say, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan?

The Emancipation Proclamation was obviously unenforceable, as it applied only to those states currently in rebellion to the Union. How about that, Lincoln takes the moral high-ground, foments trouble within his adversaries territory, and causes the adversary to waste precious manpower on internal suppression. Impressive even after 150 years.

You divine that I'm a "liberal." You're obviously invoking the same powers of political acumen that typified the train wreck that was the Confederate Government. The Great Speeches of Jefferson Davis could be inscribed on the head of a pin with a magic marker!

Dixie is dead; get over it, or accept irrelevance.

Ed

It's nowhere near the San Andreas fault, which is far to the East in the Imperial Valley.

Hello...
I am looking to purchase a Dell Inspiron 1100 notebook PC within the next day or two. I noticed that it does NOT have a serial port, but does have USB 2.0 ports (along with 56 Kbps modem port and Ethernet port). Im not sure how to configure WinAPRS (or if i can) to use a USB port rather than look for a serial port. I would buy a serial --> USB adapter to connect my radio to it. I plan on buying the radio next year, a TM-D700A mobile radio and using the internal TNC with WinAPRS for mobile APRS operation. Will this work? Possible to use USB 2.0 ports with WinAPRS? Any information greatly appreciated.

All the USB-to-Serial adapters I've seen have come with drivers that appear as a serial interface to the program.

I use a USB external modem. When plugged in, the computer automatically assigned the modem COM3, no special adapters needed. I would think plugging a TNC in would have a similar affect.

Then again, I've never heard of a computer without a serial port. That is a bit strange.

OK, this thread must be dead, as Mr. Jeswald, of Anniston, the main irrational protagonist, has resorted to looking me up on QRZ and is one step from posting my address.

The half of my family that hails from the North has handed down a legacy of the appreciation of fine killing equipment, while my Alabama heritage yields me the willingness to use them. I'm pretty sure that the carcass that goes bump isn't gonna be mine. Y'all come out now, bring Bubba too; the dogs are always hungry!

Oh yeah, re the faults. Some day, we are gonna have some mighty fine Atlantic ocean-front property out here.

Well, I certainly don't care, especially about a chickenshit "Arf" who can't stick his name on his opinions. You're worth whatever you think of yourself, and often less.

He is the proverbial "fart in a whirlwind". When he looks in the mirror, he sees the failure that we are all familiar with. Luckily, he cannot keep a woman around so we can rule out another generation!

The answer is pretty simple Ed, weather conditions.

First all the slaves were brought in by Yankee traders. It was against the law in the South to import Africans.

The problem with using slaves in the North was the short growing season and a population that must be housed and fed during the unproductive months. This made slavery a net loss situation in the North. The folks up North had no problem with slavery when the cotton was shipped to mills in the North. The problem started when the South shipped the cotton to England and other countries direct. This put the Northern mill workers out of jobs and caused the North to impose unfair tariffs on Southern products.

Slavery as an issue did indeed exist as an issue, but MONEY was the real issue. Had the South continued to supply cheap materials to the North, slavery would still be in vogue.

Excuse me gotta to go, my cell phone is playing Dixie, have to answer it...

I am seeing if I can persuade myself that digital communications protocols run over amateur radio bands might be a good thing for me to get into. Maybe some of you guys can usefully comment.

My skills, inclinations and circumstances, which I'd probably be wasting readers' time to go into, make it fairly clear to me that if I were to get into amateur radio, mostly I'd interested in running an AX.25 node that talks IP and mostly runs unattended.

So, the obvious question is, to what extent is it legally possible, and useful to others, to do that? If both possible and useful (but how? running a local-weather-data server? better connectivity for everyone through another node being around?), maybe I could do some good by studying over coming months to get started.

Their passage from Yankee ports to the Southern States was guaranteed by federal law, i.e. it was illegal to interfere with the transfer of slaves through the Northern States.

Check around with the local hams, and see if other hams share your interest.
It may be that IP over AX25 is already being done in your area, that you can hook right up to. Without other stations (hams) to connect to though, packet is not much fun. Also, if you do not have a well-developed sense of community, packet will be no good for you. It is a cooperative venture, to be part of a network of independent amateur radio operators.

The most common "newbee" mistake made by hams interested in IP packet radio is the "loner" approach, where they do things without even checking with other hams in the area to see whats already being done and perhaps join in with the local hams in their efforts. - Participate.

Hams are generally pretty friendly. There's no guarantee of 100% acceptance no matter what you do, but if you make an effort to work "with" the other hams in your area, I think you will find that they are nice to work with.

If you have slaves, you can get them to do more than raise plants. Ever hear of construction, mining or manufacture? All labor intensive, but obviously beyond the imagination of a Southern slaver.

Based strictly on economics, how could you possibly claim that the North found it cheaper to prosecute the Civil War than to accept higher-priced cotton? And following your logic, the South would have been economically devastated with the development of synthetic fabrics, so they could have tried secession maybe around 1925?

There are, at least, a few other people in my state doing IP-based stuff over AX.25, though none in my county - indeed, maybe I'll send some e-mail around. Thanks for the suggestion!

Right, thanks. What would really make a difference for me is if there was some useful community venture to which my running of a mostly-unattended AX.25 node would valuably contribute - really, that's the deciding factor for me, because it's not like there aren't plenty of other non-ham technical things that offer social contact and interesting conversation, but are easier to get into.

So, I guess that the first step really is just to ask some other AX.25 hams in my area what they're interested in. Anything from providing servers that report local weather, to researching new routing protocols, would interest me - I'd just be looking for enough stuff where me providing an extra node could actually make any consequential difference.

Have a look at the manufacturers of GSM chipsets like Analog Devices, Motorola, Texas Instruments, Siemens. They often have reference designs and evaluation boards.

Good idea, Ed.

It's an ignorant waste of hot air that would be better spouted off at rec.radio.amateur.policy , where off-topic, non-ham garbage like this belongs.

Oh, and I wanted to ask: Is it true that they call California the "cereal bowl state" because once you get past the fruits and nuts, the only thing left are the flakes?

Just wondering!

Imagine if today's liberal press had covered WWII, when we were losing an average of 309 people A DAY....

after several MONTHS of conflict in iraq, we JUST hit #400, and while it's a tragedy and all war is dreadful, we already have thrown out the tyrant that was in that nation.

We would never have made it past the beaches of normandy had CNN, MSNBC and the rest of those yellow bellied leftist news organizations had been around then as they are now.

No, I simply felt that he clearly won the Biggest Patriot of the Year contest, and I offered to start another one, in the good old-fashioned beer-swillin', cousin-marryin', Confederate flag-carryin', gun-totin', liberal-lynchin' way.

Ah, yes, hit me where it hurts: buy a vowel, callsign too whiny... what else have you learned on that fat-ass junkie hypocrite Limbaugh channel?

FO&A,

I guess, I Owe Everyone an Apology.

It is No Longer COOL to Love My Country.
- - - Hell Cool isn't 'Cool' anymore !

Today's Definition of a Patriot seems to be:
- - Someone Who Criticizes the USofA and Disparages Our Leaders.

I 'resist' this Change because I grew up in a time when
- I was Proud to Be a Boy Scout
- - A Matter of Personal Honor.
- - - But Does Personal Honor, Matter Anymore ?

Today the Boy Scouts are Labeled as Bigots.
- - - And some go so far to call them a HATE Group.

Once Again I Apologize for Loving My Country.
- - - And having Faith in Our Leaders.

But any warm body is not necessarily a citizen. The democracy can create rules, democratically approved, which limit the participation in the society. If you do not abide by the rules, you may become ineligible to continue participation within the democracy. Indeed, the simple democracy can do anything it (collectively) wants. Therein lies the reason for modifying a pure democracy with a set of fixed rules (possibly called a constitution).

Good to see your true colors.

By the way (since you say I'm on a roll), this is an amazing coincidence, but your name sounds exactly like someone throwing up.

I would be ashamed to have written what you have posted.

Have a nice day.

In the first place we are a "Republic", remember the pledge "and to the Republic for which it stands".which is ruled by a "Representative Democracy", not a pure democracy.

How is it that the same people who love to quote the "N", word to show how enlightened they are, figure that they have the right to denigrate Southerners with impunity?

I suspect that with your supercilious attitude, you have to look down on someone. Ergo, find a group that is not protected by politically correct speech and stereotype them.

Your sophomoric rhetoric is trite and boring, I suspect your total experience with 4 land has been what you have garnered from the liberal media via TV or movies.

I do note that the most egregious violations of civil rights occur in places other than 4 land...

Many of us lost ancestors in the war of northern aggression, the flag is a source of pride to a people that resisted the imposition of unfair tariffs, made it illegal to import Africans, and wanted to protect their homes. The Stars and Bars are a point of pride, and the strains of Dixie (written by a damyankee) played on a town square warms our heart.

Whatever happened to the free speech that was banded around like a three-dollar whore when this whole thread started by a Southerner denigrating other cultures? Or is this just another Limbaughesque fakery: free speech applies to only what we like and drug wars don't apply to white middle-age millionaire hypocrites.

> I suspect that with your supercilious attitude, you have to look down on someone. Ergo, find a group that is not protected by politically correct speech and stereotype them.

There is no such thing as a "group that is not protected by politically correct speech". It is a figment of your imagination and the result of mistaking paraliberals' bullshit for what liberals stand for. Sort of as if I assumed all conservatives were moral freaks like Ashcroft and Santorum.

> Your sophomoric rhetoric is trite and boring, I suspect your total experience with 4 land has been what you have garnered from the liberal media via TV or movies.

Yes, it must be that damn liberal media: Fox News, CNBC, every Christian channel anywhere, every Hz on AM, the Washington Post, etc.

Wait, I'm confused... Are you complaining that you can't legally import slaves anymore or that the aggressors' flag is a point of pride?

If I have any say in this, a patriot is someone who, among other things, applies critical thinking to the actions his country is taking (and let's not make a mistake of equating a group of corrupt politicians with the whole country) and has a courage to make a stand against the obvious mistakes that his "Leaders" are making, especially when the "Leaders" are waging wars in the interest of a foreign power and contrary to the interests of ours. Supporting "Leaders" at all cost leads to tyranny.

> Today the Boy Scouts are Labeled as Bigots.
> - - - And some go so far to call them a HATE Group.

You tell me:

From Webster, bigot (noun): a person obstinately or intolerantly devoted to his or her own opinions and prejudices.

Prejudice (noun): 1 injury or damage resulting from some judgment or action of another in disregard of one's rights; especially : detriment to one's legal rights or claims 2 a (1) : preconceived judgment or opinion (2) : an adverse opinion or leaning formed without just grounds or before sufficient knowledge b : an instance of such judgment or opinion c : an irrational attitude of hostility directed against an individual, a group, a race, or their supposed characteristics

Since the Boy Scouts specifically refuse membership to atheists and homosexuals, what does that make them?

And now you will be insulted and possibly harassed.   By those that know it all.

I have been a proud resident of Alabama since the mid 70s (with a detour in/out a few times). I have learned a LOT from the fine folks down this way. And what you say is true.

Wrong again, Walt.

I assume you're talking about Lord Baden-Powell, who some believe was a "repressed" homosexual.

Lord Robert Baden-Powell did not found Boy Scouts of America (or Girl Scouts), but he founded the larger scouting movement that began in England and upon which scouting programs worldwide are based.

Nice try.

Nope. Just the ignorant learning stuff they should have mastered at age 10. I'm amazed at some of the invented terms for a Democracy, but then I'm amazed that 14% of American adults can't read at the 4th grade level.

Evading the straightforward question duly noted. It is interesting, though, that all those parents screaming against admitting fairies into the Boy Scouts don't think twice before sending their boys to the

How is that an evasion? It's the truth (and thank you for helping to illustrate my point with the Roman Catholic Church).

The Boy Scouts organization have made their wholesome policies perfectly clear and have defended them sucessfully in court.

However, the Roman Catholic Church chose to ignore their own policies, cover up transgressions, and betray many of their members (and have been very, very unsuccessful in court). If they had been true to their faith, they would never have had any trouble.

By the way, Zoran -- I'm sorry for the harsh words earlier -- I was pretty pissed off with the way you trashed RHF for expressing his love for his country. We now live in a country where in some neighborhoods displaying the American flag is considered a vulgar irritation to others. I saw your sarcasm at his post as more of the same wrongheaded thinking.

Whatcha say we talk about radios?

If I have any say in this, a patriot is someone who, among other things, applies critical thinking to the actions his country is taking (and let's not make a mistake of equating a group of corrupt politicians with the whole country) and has a courage to make a stand against the obvious mistakes that his "Leaders" are making, especially when the "Leaders" are waging wars in the interest of a foreign power and contrary to the interests of ours. Supporting "Leaders" at all cost leads to tyranny.

> Today the Boy Scouts are Labeled as Bigots.

You tell me:

From Webster, bigot (noun): a person obstinately or intolerantly devoted to his or her own opinions and prejudices.

Prejudice (noun): 1 injury or damage resulting from some judgment or action of another in disregard of one's rights; especially : detriment to one's legal rights or claims
2 a (1) : preconceived judgment or opinion (2) : an adverse opinion or leaning formed without just grounds or before sufficient knowledge b : an instance of such judgment or opinion c : an irrational attitude of hostility directed against an individual, a group, a race, or their supposed characteristics
Since the Boy Scouts specifically refuse membership to atheists and homosexuals, what does that make them?

Reading comprehension challenged?
I will break it down for you.

See Dick with the Confederate flag.

Jane said "It was illegal to import slaves under the constitution of the confederacy."

Spot said " The war was about unfair tariffs against the South and aggression by the Northern invaders."

Dick said "Even blacks fought on the Southern side to protect their homes."

Jane said "You mean all those people that said it was about slavery are wrong?"

Spot said "You got it Jane"

I forgot you were educated in the land of fruits and nuts and humbly apologize for writing beyond your grade level.

That leads to another question how do you elect yourself as a new coordinator and what does a coordinator do and all that jazz?
    But I'm not at that point. I'm starting from scratch I was big into packet 10 years ago or so and got out of it when I went to university. Now that I'm done I'd like to play with Ampr Net. What should I be doing before I get an IP address and any thoughts on software to be running when I put my TNC into KISS (or am I missing something?) I haven't found much on the Internet unfortently hence the posting :)

FYI: the reply address I have here is so I don't have to deal with spam so please post to the group.

Thank you,

TC

AMPR Net was one of those really neat projects that had software for hardware most Hams had. A few Hams here liked the K5JB version of Net, because it worked on the 3B2 Unix box, as well as the DOS box. Alas, both K5JB and KB0QJ are both dead now, and God only knows who owns (or what dumpster they were thrown into) their old Unix boxes.

Personally I liked the JNOS version, and at the end, I was running JNOS on Linux to do my AMPR Net. You need two IP addresses from your ISP though. One IP for the connected IP, and one IP for the tunnel. AMPR Net is nothing more than tunneling IP in IP. That is, it tunnels the class A address 44.x.x.x via the Internet.

In order to tunnel though, you need a partner, and thus was set up this system of Gateways, which was a list of IP addresses that you tunneled to, and was kept up to date as people came and went.

The sad thing is, most of this is now history, and you will probably play billy-hell finding information on this.

What I really liked about AX.25 IP, was the throughput we got at 9600 baud. I set up a couple of links that were full-duplex for about 25 miles. Over this network, we basically had a better system than our 28.8 modems to the Internet. The reason being we had less overhead with our 1500 byte packets, than the crappy 576 byte PPP crap the ISP gave us.

Good luck, but I think most of the AMPR Net stuff is outdated, and obsolete, so you need to find a working neighbor. The ucsd.edu has a robot that you send DNS updates to, but the last I heard was they passworded it, and I have no clue on that anymore. Actually I find 44 net is redundant to the 10 net.

The issue being discussed is not whether they're free to make their choices, but whether excluding people based on religion and sexual orientation makes them bigots. Pay attention.

Seems to me you have problems reading. I never said the US civil war was about freeing slaves - we'll put that excuse in the same bin from which you pulled out the "blacks fought on the Southern side to protect their homes" bullshit. Yes, that same bin that is the source of "imminent danger", "nuclear weapons program", "terrorist connection", etc.

> I forgot you were educated in the land of fruits and nuts and humbly > apologize for writing beyond your grade level.

Wherever I was educated really makes no difference to what you wrote in your previous post:

>>>Many of us lost ancestors in the war of northern aggression, the flag is >>>a source of pride to a people that resisted the imposition of unfair >>>tariffs, made it illegal to import Africans, and wanted to protect their homes.
>>>The Stars and Bars are a point of pride, and the strains of Dixie (written >>>by a damyankee) played on a town square warms our heart.

So you see my dilemma: on one hand you're stating that the North was the aggressor against the innocent Southerners who just wanted to protect their homes, and on the other you're supporting the exact same war White House is waging in Iraq. Not to mention that defending a regime that was based on slavery in this day and age is really, oh how shall I put this... idiotic. So there's my position - I don't have a problem with Southerners, only with the ones still fighting for their precious Dixie that was built on human misery. Sorry - it must be my education.

Well, by substituting an irrelevant answer to a clear question. For example: John X murdered 20 women - what does that make him? The red herring answer is: a perfect father because he raised five great children.

> The Boy Scouts organization have made their wholesome policies perfectly clear and have defended them sucessfully in court.

The issue is very gray and the only reason they've been successful (5 to 4 in the Supreme Court, btw) is that atheists and homosexuals in this country (the only one among the Western nations, btw.) are still considered abnormal by the Christian majority. Had they excluded blacks or Jews, for example, no "private organization" status would help them in the outrage they would raise. Read up on the "public accommodation" issue in this case and realize that the Boy Scouts are indirectly funded by the public.

There's no need to apologize - it's a free country and sometimes some of us learn something new in the process. My primary reason for getting involved in this pathetic thread is that I hate hypocrisy and inconsistency. So when the political discussion inevitably turns into the bashing of liberals, ACLU, etc. for their alleged anti-Americanism, I can't keep quiet. In my opinion, the average ACLU volunteer is a bigger American Patriot� that ten thousand Limbaugh wannabes. Also, as a sort of an impartial observer, I can say that the biggest problem of the US partisan voter is that he sees the other party as a devil incarnate, and his own as an infallible moral beacon. Hence, this entire thread.

> Whatcha say we talk about radios?

Yeah, but the dx conditions suck lately.

Make up an IP number for yourself and hey presto! You're a coordinator!

The people who used to take care of this do not care any more, so just make something up and go. Who will ever know the difference? You might get one, maybe two other hams to play with this stuff, so it's not like you have to worry about causing any trouble with your AMPR station or the addresses you make up. Just stay off of the regular packet frequencies and you won't bother anybody or interrupt anything important.

All the software you used 10 years ago is still around, and has not changed in the intervening decade. If you still have your old setup from ten years ago just fire it up. It is 100% up to date. There has been no progress in AMPR software in the last decade, hence the lack of info on the Internet. Thopugh AMPR is effectively dead, many hams enjoy nostalgia activities involved in amateur radio. If you enjoy operating AMPR and have found another ham who will participate with you, there is absolutely no reason not to go ahead and do so.

Enjoy!

Correct. In a republic, voters choose a government to take decisions for them.

Yes, thanks. it was the AEA vs AES that had me confused. It looks interesting. It's a shame they didn't incude the "sound card" in it, also. There's a USB Soundblaster that does that part of it.
And I wonder if it provides support for FSK.

We have tried for six years to get the "official hosts list" at UCSD fixed. So far no result. So we just started over and assign our own addresses out of net 44.116. The coordinator for that net block will occasionally answer email requests, but has not yet managed to get any updates into the system ...except the first one just over six years ago. We now have something like 50 hosts online, spread over 11 subnets. The official list is useless, and I've been unable to get any response at all from Brian. Yes, we run our own DNS, since the official one is useless.

the official list contains addresses for dead people, people who moved out of the area 15 years ago, people who changed callsign, and about 100 people who obtained addresses long ago and never got on packet :-)

So pick addresses from the correct net block and use 'em.

Maybe someday someone else will take over the administration of net 44 and then the official DNS might become useful again.

While any address will do, the only real reason for using 44 net is if you want to route with other 44 net folks. Most of these have disbanded.

In the link we made after AMPR Net died, we just used 10 Net for WAN addresses, and 192.168 for LAN addresses, and shared the 10 net host file (no WAN DNS was used).

Heck, he must be either dead, or old enough to be in a home somewhere.

Same deal across the US. The only thing running is the UCSD scripts which the school probably doesn't even know exists.

I would recommend the 10 net and 192.168 nets for just about any endeavor today. The number of 10 Net hosts (HF and VHF ports mostly) could be done using a shared /etc/hosts file.

I'm wondering if the new AOR Fast Radio Modem could be used for a nice 2400 baud links on HF? Voice and data in one box!

Have been staying out of this, but your Leninist historical revisionism is too much. Having lost ancestors on BOTH sides, I calls that conflict the War of Stupid Secession. And while Dixie is a bright & lively tune, it's sound should forever evoke memories of the dark heart of the Confederacy.

Hi All

Thought I'd post my resolution to a problem I had with v1.3.0 of this package

After making and installing everything I trid to run make-Wyman1x-wav and it returned with;

bin2sym307pm8a failed: invalid command name "system"

I simply modified the make-Wyman1x-wav script by changing the two uses of "system" to "exec" and it worked properly.

Its early days yet but a 2M FM 80km path (abt S3 each way) yielded a perfect decode at the other end (10% redund). That end was using the Windows app. Only problem was that a 2 minute file send took them 6-8min to decode (old slow P166)!

Linux OS is SuSE 8.1 Professional

Cheers Bob VK2YQA

Um ... we ARE the "... other 44 net folks."
There is also activity nearby in 44.26, 44.12, 44.24.

Why not use 44? Then you can link with other tcp/ip systems nearby.

There's some poop in all the help:

1) The latest AMPR coordinators are at: http://noh.ucsd.edu/~brian/amprnets.txt
(which if you can't remember, it's on the www.ampr.org page)
The one in the FTP directory is obsolete (for some reason, bad script probably).

2) To make changes to the robot, the address is: ampraddr@hamradio.ucsd.edu
If you use anything else it will produce heat only.

Good luck,
Jim

No contact information, and in the case of the coordinators for this area, no action when one does figure out how to contact them.

> 2) To make changes to the robot, the address is: ampraddr@hamradio.ucsd.edu

I've tried it a couple times, and it appeared to work, but the information was reset back to the old (and incorrect) information within a day or so. If you have some info on how one might cause the robot to do something useful, that would be much appreciated.

How would one go about getting a new coordinator?
We have several volunteers for that job, but to date zero response to requests for info on how to make it happen.

I don't think so Bob. Basically you send out your MAC address and it sends back an IP, but I think the delay would be too great for even 9600 simplex (plus separated LAN's). Just guessing.

Don't bother, Dan. The guy is from wig city. Having no identity or character of his own, he leeches off of his betters. It's best to think of his wild claims and exaggerations as symptoms of his mental state, a cry for help. -Then ignore them.

FO&A.

This is why some many so called 'democrats'
do not like the Pledge of Allegiance.

For those simple words
"I Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America,
and To The REPUBLIC For Which It Stands...

http://history.vineyard.net//pledge.htm
http://home.att.net/~poofcatt/july.html
http://www.homeofheroes.com/hallofheroes/1st_floor/flag/1bfc_pledge.html

I Proudly Stand with My Hand over My Heart and Head Held High:

"I Pledge Allegiance to the Flag
of the United States of America,
and to the REPUBLIC for which it stands:
one Nation under "GOD", Indivisible,
With Liberty and Justice for ALL."
- - - amen, Amen. AMEN !

God Bless America - Just an old Boy Scout ~ RHF
Does anyone remember the "American Creed" ?

"I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the People, by the People, for the People; whose Just Powers are Derived from the Consent of the Governed; A Democracy in a Republic, a Sovereign Nation of many Sovereign States; a Perfect Union, one and inseparable; Established upon those Principles of Freedom, Equality, Justice, and Humanity for which American Patriots Sacrificed their Lives and Fortunes.

I therefore believe it is My Duty to My Country to Love it; to Support its Constitution; to Obey its Laws; to Respect its Flag; and to Defend it Against ALL Enemies."

Yeah,  I've seen his 'postings' elsewhere.

I just enjoy watching them 'squirm' when they can't validate what they say.

Now that we established who the biggest American patriot is, when do we move on to the dick measuring contest? The rules are the same as in the patriotism game: he who shouts the loudest, wins.

FO&A.

This is why some many so called 'democrats'
do not like the Pledge of Allegiance.

For those simple words
"I Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag
of the United States of America,
and To The REPUBLIC For Which It Stands...

http://history.vineyard.net//pledge.htm
http://home.att.net/~poofcatt/july.html
http://www.homeofheroes.com/hallofheroes/1st_floor/flag/1bfc_pledge.html

I Proudly Stand with My Hand over My Heart and Head Held High:

"I Pledge Allegiance to the Flag
of the United States of America,
and to the REPUBLIC for which it stands:
one Nation under "GOD", Indivisible,
With Liberty and Justice for ALL."
- - - amen, Amen. AMEN !

God Bless America - Just an old Boy Scout ~ RHF
Does anyone remember the "American Creed" ?

"I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the People, by the People, for the People; whose Just Powers are Derived from the Consent of the Governed; A Democracy in a Republic, a Sovereign Nation of many Sovereign States; a Perfect Union, one and inseparable; Established upon those Principles of Freedom, Equality, Justice, and Humanity for which American Patriots Sacrificed their Lives and Fortunes.

I therefore believe it is My Duty to My Country to Love it; to Support its Constitution; to Obey its Laws; to Respect its Flag; and to Defend it Against ALL Enemies."

Good thoughts. Trouble is that the Socialist Democrats care not for these beliefs.
The greatest threat to our nation today is the touchy-feely political correctness movement being fomented by these hand-wringers.

"Throughout history, it has been the inaction of those who could have acted; the indifference of those who should have known better; the silence of the voice of justice when it mattered most; that has made it possible for evil to triumph."

Danny and Chucky are in need of some serious help. Common knowledge....

Bob

The persons in need of immediate help are the whiny-assed baby-like adults that have a problem with Dan.
Dan did nothing wrong. He was honest.
He made a comment about "Ragheads". So what? He didn't hide behind the cowardly Political Correctness shield.
You babies took it upon yourselves to chastise Dan for his choice of words.
What gives YOU the right?
Did Dan's choice of words cause you little politically correct babies to fill your diapers? If so, too damned bad!
Dan is in no need of "some serious help" as you posit. The opposite is true...it is YOU that needs to rethink your ideas.

Liberals are an odd sort...they claim to support freedom of speech...so long as it is supportive of their ideology. They make no bones about trying to stifle the ideas of others when it does not agree with their opinions.

Let's see...I will go for the shock value here...yes, Ragheads are a threat to us...Muslims are involved in a religious war against us. Muslims/Ragheads are convinced that it is their calling to kill us with any means available.

It is the duty of our Armed Forces to kill them before they visit upon us another World Trade Center slaughter.

Dan...hats off to you. It is time we stood up to these heathens and call a spade a spade.

During Clinton's 8 years in office 59 Americans were killed in terrorist bombings. Clinton did nothing. He even ignored the first attack on the World Trade Center.

I stand behind our President and our troops who are makng a stand.

Back to you, Bob. Want to wring your hands and whine?

I don't think "they" have a problem with Dan, or myself either. I think that they are anti-ham trolls, out to disrupt these newsgroups with off-topic bullshit, any way "they" can.

That's just a theory, of course, but it fits the facts. Notice how they multi-post to ham radio newsgroups only? It's a troll, who should be reported to his ISP I suppose, since he won't take a hint and buzz off. (sigh)

Besides -- we don't want Zoran to feel even more frustrated.

Why is it that when somebody does show a basic love for our country, the principles it stands for, and a respect for those that have fought to maintain our freedoms, that some feel they have to try to belittle them?

Less than 1% changed the president in the last election.

It is a republic because we have the electorial college to do the actual voting instead of having the population as a whole to do the voting.
Even if the college did vote in porportion of the people in their state, some states have a larger percentage of the votes. This way it is possiable for a president to have the most votes of the people and still not be elected president.

Also congress does the voting on the laws. It would take forever to get anything done if a country the size of the US had the whole population voting on every Bill in congress. Sometimes this does not seem like a bad idea :-)

I would enjoy applying some "PC' to him.   Oh, thats paddle correction btw.

The guy doing this is obviously juvenile. Probably some young punk sneaking into daddys room to play on the computer. A result of Canadian and now Americas own creation. What a shame.

And I will continue to speak my mind. Whether it is politically correct or not.

Thanks for the support.

Another moron to add to the pile.

How can you support Bush when he and the bin Laden family had oil business dealings going back to the 70's?

Why did we give Osama bin Laden millions of dollars to fight the Russians in Afganistan?

Why was Saddam Hussein awarded the keys to the City of Detroit in 1980?

Why did they blow up the World Trade Centre when there was 1000 other buildings in hundreds of other countries to choose from?

Because of racist morons like you, thats why. Want some more apple pie?

My 16 year old grand neice has a MENSA level IQ and is certainly not

People don't like the "modified" pledge, because it brings the Pope and the King of England into the Allegiance.

Meaning...YOU don't like it, not the "people" you speak of.
The Pope? My, oh my. You really ARE off the wall, aren't you?

Another moron to add to the pile.

How can you support Bush when he and the bin Laden family had oil business dealings going back to the 70's?
/
The same way idiots like you can support a rapist who gave top-secret missile technology to a nation that is sworn to go to war with us.

Why did we give Osama bin Laden millions of dollars to fight the Russians in Afganistan?

Why did Clinton accept hundreds of thousands of dollars from the Communist Chinese?

Why was Saddam Hussein awarded the keys to the City of Detroit in 1980?

Why did Clinton pardon convicted felons who had "donated" monies to his libraryl?

Why did they blow up the World Trade Centre when there was 1000 other buildings in hundreds of other countries to choose from?

Because they didn't get it right the first time they tried. And they got away with it because Clinton was a spineless pussy.

Because of racist morons like you, thats why. Want some more apple pie?

Sure. I like apple pie. Make it a double helping.
What is your favorite...cream puff?

That is debatable. Especially considering the huge amount of voter fraud the Democrats were found to have instigated.

The best thing to do is look at the latest AEA catalog, which is available on their web site. Basically, it a combination sound card

All I get on their website is the name of it, and "ask about it".

> maintain our freedoms, that some feel they have to try to belittle them?

Uhm... because "a basic love for our country", much like any other love, is supposed to be shown by actions and deeds, not by words, pledges and by worshipping flags, politicians and deities. Especially not by straw man arguments on why "so called democrats do not like the Pledge of Allegiance". Words mean shit and nationalism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.
And now, back to that other game: I claim 15 inches. What do you say? It must be true, since I claim it. Waiter, another round!

So much for what?

You whined about RHF posting patriotic notes (you were wanting deeds, etc....pretty silly, since this IS a newsgroup), saying that words weren't enough to profess love (of country) -- I mentioned poetry, which is a great way to do so. In fact, I found RHF's post and some of the links therin pretty inspirational.

But you just seem to want to bitch about him posting it.

Even your call sign looks like you're crying.

and there-in lies your problem. A republic is a merely how a majority is achieved. A Democracy is how the government is formed. The existence of a legislature, an executive, and a supreme court, are the only things that identify a Democracy (each with their checks and balances). A Democracy can have a direct vote, or a representative vote.

A Republic is a tamed cat, a direct Democracy is a wild cat.
The dog would be an executive who tried to manipulate the Supreme Court, or other federal courts.

IQ has nothing to do with it, and MENSA membership would make her a handicapped person in my book, as who would want to brag about such a thing.

If enough people wanted to change things, I believe 16 year olds could be free to vote, but then they must also be free to draft into the military, or other service to the country.18 year olds got the right to vote because they were dying for their country. Your niece would have to show cause.

I personally think that only those who are 18 and above, and are not on Social Security should be allowed to vote.

I can't really agree with you about the "no Social Security" idea, Gene. My father is 76 and is still one of the sharpest, clearest thinkers that I know. Also, I could not imagine telling someone with the military service of Chuck Yeager that he couldn't vote.

I assume your idea is that if they're on an entitlement program, they shouldn't be voting -- the principle being that "any system that robs Peter to pay Paul can always count on the support of Paul." I agree, that is a problem.

We have greatly wavered from the voting system of our forefathers. You used to have to be male, a substantial landowner, a veteran, or a combination of the above to vote. Of course, now we've gone too far -- in California, any illegal immigrant that doesn't mind showing their new driver's license and lying to a voter registrar will soon be able to vote.

There should be some sort of educational requirement for voting. I've heard plenty of radio stunts where they send a reporter out to ask people on the street who (as an example) Dick Cheney is, and about one in six knows that he's the vice president of the United States. If these people are voting, that's a travesty.

I disagree with the campaigns the continually say "go vote." If you can't do it as an informed citizen, please don't.

Grab this file:

ftp://ftp.ucsd.edu/hamradio/amprnets

Look up your coordinator, and start there. If your coordinator has lost interest, then you can elect yourself as the new coordinator :-)

Please play nice people.

Look at your current thread topic and then look at the list of newsgroups you are crossposting into. Then remove any newsgroup in your reply where this thread is completely off-topic.

If this leaves you with no groups remaining, oh well. (Pick one newsgroup

Jackie, the sad fact is each of the Clinton statements is (as you also indicate) true.

Unfortunately the ridiculous statements you made are not.

"<<SNIP>>
> > How can you support Bush when he and the bin Laden family had oil

Should they have a crystal ball? I know of no such deals, however, because the Bush family invested in domestic oil in central and southern Texas. I do know that the Bin Laden family controls one of the largest Middle-Eastern construction companies. If they did build a refinery overseas in the 70's, it would not surprise me if they did business -- especially since Usama Bin Laden didn't activate Al Qaeda until the late 80's.

> > Why did we give Osama bin Laden millions of dollars to fight the

We didn't. However, we did supply weapons to an opposition faction of Afghanistan freedom fighters that eventually splintered into several warring factions. Years later, one of these factions became the Taliban, which eventually allied with Al Qaeda, years after the Russians had gone. The northern Afghan freedom fighters allied with our troops to help overthrow Al Qaeda and the Taliban.

I can find no evidence of this, even on the urban legends page at snopes.com. However, knowing something of the Democrat shenanigans in the city politics of Detroit, it wouldn't have surprised me...

Find out what happened to Socrates and get back to us. I don't remember Athens having a supreme court.

Yep.... they were KEENLY aware of Osama back in the Reagan administration days..... believe it or not it goes back that far! Ole Ollie North brought it to that administrations attention and nothing was done.

I typically agree more with the Libertarian parties' ideals, except for the drug policies.....   As a former user (knock on wood, 10 years and 2 months drug-free) and also dealing with people that are users in the emergency services related fields, I have absolutely no use for any drug not prescribed by a doctor.

Actually a representative republic. Three year olds have no vote and voters vote for representatives, not laws.

And if drugs were legalized, would you feel the same way or would you start using again? An adult has an inalienable right to determine the contents of his or her body, for better or worse.

Follow the directions below and in two weeks you'll have up to $20000.00 in your PayPal account. There is a very high rate of participation in the program because of its low investment and high rate of return. Just $5.00 to one person!

THAT'S ALL !!!

If you are a skeptic and don't think the program will work, I urge you to give it a try anyway! It REALLY WORKS! Why do you think so many people are promoting it ?

LOOK AT IT THIS WAY: If the Program is a total failure for you and you never get even $1.00 in return, your total loss will be the $5.00! If you are not yet a paypal member, there is no risk at all!!! If the Program is only moderately successful for you, your PayPal account will have several hundred dollars deposited into it within the next few days! If you actively participate in the Program, you could have up to $20,000.00 in your PayPal account within two weeks!

Now let me tell you the simple details.

Getting Started!!

If you're not already a user of PayPal, the very first thing you need to do is go to PayPal and sign up. It takes two minutes and Pay Pal will deposit $5.00 in your account just for becoming a member. That makes this program's total cost $0!!! Follow this link to open your PayPal account:

https://www.paypal.com

Now log into your PayPal account, and send the PayPal account of the person listed in Position 1 $5.00 PayPal will ask you to select type. (Select "service" and put "$5.00 donation" for subject.) When person in Position 1 receives notification of your payment, you can simply copy this page and change the names in position #1 & #2 & #3 as instructed. Remember, only the person in Position 1 on the list gets your $5.00 donation. Send them a donation then remove #1 PayPal account from the list. Move the other two accounts up & add your Paypal account to #3 position. After you have retyped the names in the new order, IMMEDIATELY send the revised message to as many people as possible. PROMOTE! PROMOTE! The more you promote the Program, the more you will receive in donations!! That's all there is to it. You are reading this message in usenet, and usenet is the best way to spread the word about the program. Post this message to AT LEAST 200 groups in usenet(there are over 20, 000), after you send the 5 dollars to the person at #1. This will guarentee you a profit from this program. The more groups you post it to, the more money you will make!!!

When your name reaches Position 1 (usually in less than a week) it will be your turn to receive the cash. $5.00 will be sent to your PayPal account by people just like you who are willing to send $5.00 dontation and receive up to $20,000 in less than two weeks. Because there are only (3) names on the list you can anticipate 80% of your cash within two weeks.

Anytime you find yourself short on cash just take out your $5.00 donation program and send it to 50 prospects. Imagine if you sent it to 100 or even more. Most people spend more than $5 on the lottery every week with no real hope of ever winning.

IMPORTANT!!! IN ORDER FOR THIS PROGRAM TO WORK, YOU MUST BE HONEST. DO NOT ADD YOUR EMAIL IMMEDIATELY TO THE #1 POSITION, AND MAKE SURE TO SEND YOUR 5 DOLLARS TO THE PERSON AT #1. IF EVERYONE WHO TRIED THIS DIDN"T SEND THE MONEY, THEN NOBODY WOULD MAKE A DIME. 5 DOLLARS IS A VERY SMALL INVESTMENT, ESPECIALLY WHEN YOUR ABOUT TO MAKE MANY MANY MANY TIMES THAT AMOUNT. IF WE ARE ALL HONEST, THEN WE ALL MAKE LOTS OF MONEY!!

REMEMBER, you add your email to the #3 spot, and then move everyone else up 1(deleting the person who was formally in the #1 spot, and who you should have sent your money to). DO NOT add your email to #1 when you start this program. If everyone did this, then NO ONE would make a cent.

THIS PROGRAM WORKS - JUST TRY IT

POSITION # 1 PAYPAL Account: lamsmo@aol.com

POSITION # 2 PAYPAL ACCOUNT: pepsiholic44@aol.com

POSITION # 3 PAYPAL ACCOUNT: bunnylovemedo@yahoo.com

Integrity and honesty make this plan work.
Participants who actively promote this program will average between $8000 and $12000 and receive the donations within two weeks.

This is not a chain letter. You are simply making a donation of $5.00 to another person. The Program does not violate title 18 section 1302 of the Postal and lottery code.

Remember -TIME is of the essence. YOU can choose to live Paycheck-to-Paycheck or live FREE from FINANCIAL BONDAGE. Become a part of the donation program and help people help people.

This program is about helping each other!

Success is a journey - Not a destination!

Start Your Journey TODAY!!!!

Some experiments over an obstructed path on 70 cm, 9600 baud, suggest maxframe 16 - 32 and paclen of 60 -100 give the maximum throughput. Note that this is an implementation of AX.25 that uses slow-start and selective reject / out-of-order frame recovery.

Across a "very good" line of sight path, maxframe of 32 and paclen of 1024 did best.

These were point-to-point links, half duplex.
About 10 MB of data were used for the tests.

Does Flexnet implement large window / slow-start / selective nak?
If not, it cannot come near the best transfer rate over a poor channel.
Over a good channel most anything will give near max transfer rate.

I don't have any idea, Hank. It's a proprietary protocol, not open-source and there is not much discussion of FlexNet's internal workings that I would be privy to. If I was privy to discussion of it, there's question as to how much I would understand. It's a freebee, download a copy and see what it looks like to you. You'd know what you were seeing better than I would. Get two FlexNets talking to each other, see what they do if you are interested.

> Over a good channel most anything will give near max transfer rate.

Most anything can, but in most cases with traditional static-parameter setups, hams tend to play with the bare minimum required to get them on the air, and leave the rest at default values. Those default values are compromise settings, optimized for general use-ability under almost any operating conditions.

FlexNet's AI will optimize your link parameters for you, in fact it does so continuously, as far as I can tell. If everybody is using FlexNet, then you don't have to worry about parameters causing problems and everybody is running at or near optimum all the time, automagically. TXDELAY is really about the only link parameter that you can maladjust and mess up. There's not much left to argue about after that, except SSID's I guess.

User-settable parameters include: Mycall/SSIDs, TXDelay, Speed.

Some of the drivers have additional parms such as COM port numbers, addresses, etc..

Note: There is an option on FlexNet nodes to disallow connects from stations running too much TXD, sending them a short message about the problem and disconnecting. It detects TXD, and shuts out stations using more than 100 ms unnecessary TXD. This is not used much here in the US, but personally I like it. - If you have too little TXD, you cannot connect. If you have too much, the node tells to to take a hike. It makes it easy to sneak up on an optimum setting, and keeps anybody from operating with really bad TXD, slowing things down for everyone else.

The main thing about a packet net is that it is a social critter. You have to figure on a small number of experts, not nearly enough to go around and hold everybody's hand. By using expert system software though, appliance operators like myself can at least simulate having an expert sitting in at our packet stations. FlexNet greatly simplifies the setup procedure and at the same time vastly improves average link performance for individuals, and by that token for entire networks.

Oh. Never mind.

I run only code that I write myself, based on open and documented standards. FlexNet is therefore totally uninteresting. But in any case, it cannot get more throughput than what I mentioned in my other reply.
Did I mention that the code we run here also has adaptive parameter settings? This stuff is not rocket science, and one can in fact do as well as can be done using open protocols. No need to get stuck with a protocol that is basically unsupported and undocumented.

Well, that is your personal preference... You understand of course that with most hams, the personal preference will run to issues like ease of use, utility and performance. Most of them are unaware of programming - related "protocol war" issues. They just want good performing software, easy to set up and run.

>But in any case,
> it cannot get more throughput than what I mentioned in my other reply.

I'll have to take your word for that. You generally know what you are talking about, so it's not like it's a big stretch for me to do so, eh?

> Did I mention that the code we run here also has adaptive parameter > settings?

No, I don't remember seeing anything about it, though I do remember reading somewhere that the adaptive parameter concept has been around for quite a while. I briefly studied expert system programming in college, many years ago so that concept can't be called "new" either... Putting the two of them together in order to make packet radio both simpler and better performing is a relatively new thing though, brought to us by the folks in the FlexNet group.

>This stuff is not rocket science, and one can in fact do as well > as can be done using open protocols.

In theory, I'm sure it could... So far in the real world; no bananna.

>No need to get stuck with a > protocol that is basically unsupported and undocumented.

FlexNet is supported and documented (for users) and there is a FlexNet API (for programmers)... That's all the support and documentation I have any need for, and much more than most hams would care about. They just want to get on the air and operate, and don't put in a lot of time worrying about whether they can diddle with the code.

For my part, I am glad that FlexNet cannot be diddled with. Just look at the mess with *NOS and Linux to see why. Too many junior programmers out there, all full of clever new ways to screw up. I know for sure that if I busted my hiney for months to produce some good software, I would not want a bunch of pencil-necked geeks transmogrifying it and putting it out with my name still on it, upsetting and confusing users with dozens of bogus versions of the software that might or might not work. That is basically the position of the authors of FlexNet, and it makes very good sense.

There have been two concentrated efforts to replicate FlexNet's A.I. so far, with AGW packet engine (proprietary) being a much higher quality, popular product than X-Net (open-source), which worked out to be too buggy, disorganized and complicated to gain any popularity. Neither one of these succeeded in replicating the performance edge you get with FlexNet, though AGW comes close, from what I understand. So while it may be true that FlexNet's adaptive parameter system is not "rocket science", apparently folks have been having a harder time trying to replicate its function than you seem to expect.

The big drawback with AGW packet engine is the price tag. Why pay extra to use an imperfect knock-off of higher quality, better performing software (FlexNet) that you can get for free?

AGW gets a lot of LandLine-Lid types to use his software by making it easy to set up a gateway with AGW... The FlexNet people on the other hand do not encourage people to hook FlexNet up to non-ham stuff at all- which makes it less popular with the "non-ham" types, I suppose. You can of course hook FlexNet up to non-ham stuff but nobody is encouraged to, or given a helpful "how-to" tips on how to do it by the authors. There are of course LandLine-Lid FlexNet users, but generally I have found that there are very few of them. FlexNet is not "PC" among the LLL "non-ham" set so they generally avoid it, going for AGW instead. Conversely, "non-ham" stuff is not "PC" within most of the FlexNet community either, so it all works out fo r the best.

Remember that the question about throughput was put forward by someone who identified themself as a beginner. He didn't mention anything about wanting to re-write the code. Currently there are only a two packages that offer optimised performance coupled with easy, simple setup that would fill that persons' stated requirements. There's FlexNet, and it's expensive knock-off AGW... Naturally, I recommended FlexNet to my fellow ham.

This is why we build independent, all ham radio packet network. You cannot "back up" a network that you are dependent upon in order to communicate. That would be like having a special phone number to dial if the phones go dead.   (Duh!)

In the event of an emergency involving the Internet, we will find that alternate, functional digital communications at any baud rate will be immensely valuable, wherever it exists. What is important is that the independent amateur packet radio infrastructure (network) be in place and functioning, ready to serve when needed.

If you do not have a packet network in your area, consider getting together with other hams in your area to start putting one together. Shoot for functionality first, as a functional 1200 baud system is vastly superior to a planned-for high-speed system that gets discussed and argued about, but never built or used. Modest networks can be upgraded and improved, and are basically useful from day one. That's the best way to start off, and get the maximum number of local hams involved.

USPN   http://www.uspacket.net   is specifically dedicated to independent amateur packet radio networking and networkers in the U.S.A.. If you are interested in starting up or upgrading a packet network in your area, give us a visit!

Nope.... I have absolutely no desire to ever use again. In fact, the smell of marijuana now makes me naseaus (sp.?)

An adult has an inalienable right to determine > the contents of his or her body, for better or worse.

Yeah that is true..... to a point, unless it starts to affect me. A person using while operating any kind of vehicle has the possibility to affect me.
I have dealt with this many times on the emergency services side. Also, another effect is if I have to pick up slack because a person either went on a "bender" over the weekend or the night before, I SHOULD NOT have to pick up that slack. But unfortunately today, that is the way that things work.

I cannot find one viable reason why to use any drugs at this point in my life unless prescribed by a physician for medicinal purposes. (The only two drugs left I have yet to kick are caffiene and nicotine....... but working on that.)

Alcohol is legal as it should be. Drinking and driving is illegal as it should be.
Illegal alcohol in the 1920's was very good for organized crime just as illegal marijuana is very good for organized crime today.

AGW's price tag is on the order of a six-pack of beer. That's hardly a drawback.
The old free AGW is all anyone needs for 9600 and less speeds. I'm assuming you're talking about the IP part, and not the new version he's selling.

> AGW gets a lot of LandLine-Lid types to use his software by making it easy

I used AGW to do APRS with a soundcard, and never used the IP part of it.
The IP part isn't very useful past Windows 95, and who runs that anymore? The non-IP part was fun to program against.

The obvious other question, is what data do you have that needs throughput?

When everyone realized that all they were getting on the BBS was out of band mods and people on soap boxes complaining about whatever they were complaining about, then it all caved-in on itself, as a worthless endeavor.

Until we hear what the data is, our definition of good throughput may be morse code at 5 WPM, or it may be a WiFi at 50 Mbps.

The best way to get off of cigarettes is to start smoking cigars.
The best way to get off of coffee and soda pop is to drink cold water in a bottle.

The object is to replace one pacifier with another.  Cigars are easy to quit.

That's not just a lie, but a silly, destructive lie. The content of packet messages compare very well with - this newsgroup for example - and had nothing to do with the decline of the US packet network. Some of them are much more interesting than what I generally find here.

Other parts of the world that were not infected with LandLine Lid stations did just fine while the infested US packet net steadily declined. The hams were reading and posting the same bulletins and messages in both networks. Think it through, and figure it out for yourself.

I'm sorry but this is a matter of historical fact, not opinion. If you want to smear the hobby with lies, I will slap you down for it. The last thing we need here is another anti-ham troll.

You can take your anti-ham attitude, Gene, fold it up so that it's all sharp little corners, and stick it where the sun don't shine. If you do not like the hobby, get out of it.

You're the one calling everyone a LID if they don't fit into your narrow definition of what a "ham" is. Don't try to foist that off on others.

Who cares? The USA isn't a democracy either. Democracy is three wolves and a sheep voting about dinner.

(I know that SSTV signals aren't digital, but I'm not quite sure where else to post this question!)

I have one of Kenwood's KVT-10 SSTV units (the commercial version of the VC-H1) and I'm trying to find SSTV software that can receive the various modes sent by this unit. It offers Robot 36 (easy enough), but also has two additional (apparently proprietary) color modes and two black-and-white modes, in addition to Kenwood "Fast FM".

I can almost receive a clear picture using the Color 1 mode if I use "MR73" mode on MMSTV and manually start the receive session. The frame size is right and a color image is received, but the image is still messed up with horizontal lines and other problems.

Does anyone know of a way to receive these other modes from the KVT-10 (short of using another KVT-10 unit)? Would it help if I posted (on the web, not here) the images that I've been able to receive so far (i.e., when using MR73 mode)?

Thanks for any help!

Robert

I am investigating using a DSVD modem for remote control.

I have been told that conventional DSVD's have rather poor audio quality. The new AMBE chips promise higher fidelity voice compression. Does anyone know of a DSVD that uses these chips? How hard would it be to interface an AMBE chip to a conventional (non-DSVD) modem? Apparently, the chip requires an external circuit to do framing, so it is not serial port ready. Anyone have info on how to do framing?

BTW, I only have a 28.8k dial up connection to work with.
I would like to avoid getting a second phone line.

Charles, just like the other technical old wives, as usual you've got it all wrong.

May I refer you to the grand-master himself - Sir Isach Newton. The measurement standard is NOT the head of a pin - it is the point of a NEEDLE which differs by an order of magnitude in smallness.

I was referring to the American standard, of course, since American politics were involved.

Over here, we've had them dancing on the heads of pins for quite a while, over 150 years. Maybe it's the rich foods and leisurely life-style over here that makes it necessary for us to have a little bit more room for our angels.

At 8 kbps I'd say it was much more than "poor" quality, and should be sufficient for any voice communications.

None. DSVD standard is written to use G.729 standard.

Hard, and expensive.

It requires an external A/D and D/A converter, but it does all the framing (variable speeds plus FEC).

Get a couple of MultiTech DSVD modems.

A representative republic would probably be a democracy, depending on whether it had separate legislative, executive, and court systems. The United states is a republic, and it is a democracy, and it has majority rule by representative government.

Not true. None of those systems are/were a democracy because they

Oh. OK. That is law. Not a big deal. I thought the poster was going to moan that some factions of the 'minority' community are being purposely disenfranchised.
Liberal mindsets see these things differently and the rule of law has no

GS,

"The US is a democracy.
Any country is a democracy,
which has a legislature,
an executive,
and a supreme court."

I see you have ADDED to your 'original definition' of a "Democracy"

:o)

But, All of the Countries, Nations, Systems

* Had Equality Before the Law - As Defined by Their Laws.
- - - In Cuba - Fidel just place 1000s in Prison - For Thinking Wrong.
- - - In Iran - Citizens have Equality before Civil Law and "The Faithful" may be 'judged' before Shari`ah (Islamic Religious) Law.
(What could be more Equal?)

* Had the Right To Vote - And The Responsibility to Vote.
- - - In Iraq - Saddam was recently Re-Elected by 99.46% of the Vote and 99.73% (Nearly Everyone) Voted.
- - - The Peoples "Democratic" [Republics] always have Higher Voter Turn-Outs than the USofA, Canada, The UK, EURO-Land, Japan and other so called western democracies. These Peoples Democratic Republics are evidently more democratic then the USofA an the others western democracies.

* * Think of the USofA:
- - - Jimmy Carter has had to "Monitor" elections in the USofA.
- - - Look at the last Presidential Election in the USofA and the Missed Votes in the State of Florida.

Another top-posting wad of blather from a civics-deficient mind. Somewhat understandable, however, since you are deriving your wisdom from the US Department of State. Looking at your reference, I am amazed to read the verbal back-flips about what they think a democracy ought to be. I'm further amazed at how they do anything to avoid calling a "representative" democracy a republic. No wonder our foreign policy is a crock of shit; we officially can't understand what we are!

A democracy may or may not have morals, may or may not protect the rights of minorities, and is practically unworkable for groups beyond a certain size. And once you modify a democracy, by adding modifying conditions, it likely isn't a democracy anymore.

I seem to remember having to move a jumper inside the KAM to increase the HF output.
The ACC socket on my ts-440s needs more audio than the KAM gives, even on this setting. Use a mic plug!

You were not happy with destroying the packet radio newsgroup? You and your toadies post to everything on almost every mainstream newsgroup. When are you going to stop?

You are the troll, whose killfile expires on me every 30 days or I did not killfile you for a certain newsgroup.

There use to be nothing but on topic information here until you showed up.

Your buddy W4NTI did not refute the charges on eham with any effectiveness. He merely attempted to attack the credibility of the accuser. He could offer no real rebuttal to the story. Why don't you blast him about it for awhile in email and leave us alone?

Per Websters Dictionary;

Democracy

1. Rule by the people.
2. A community so governed.
3. The quality of being democratic.

Republic;

A state in which the sovereign power is vested in representatives chosen by the people.

Constitution;

The system of fundamental laws of a nation or society.

Thus, we are indeed, a Constitutional Republic.

We vote for and elect REPRESENTITIVES. These folks are 'supposed' to vote in congress, either state or federal, what the electorate wants.

We are a representitive form of government.

A true democracy is one where everyone gets a vote, and the majority wins.

Can you imagine how much fun it would be to have to vote on every single issue, local, state, federal? There wouldn't be enough time in a lifetime to do it.

Our representitives are 'supposed' to base their lawmaking on the CONSTITUTION. Obviously this is not working.

What is happening is the judiciary of APPOINTED, not elected, judges are actually making the law.

In reality this country should stand up and revolt. We are NOT following our constitution.

So...what sort of government do we REALLY have?

Trolls are insects, best ignored.

He wants power and followers, and by "standing up to" the allies, and Israel by proxy, he gains major political capital that might have been useful once Saddam had successfully rebuilt his conventional military. A weak nation could be conquered and "Saddamized" rather easily with nothing more than his strong conventional military and an indigenous population of committed sympathetic radicals.

Saddam figured the allied forces would think twice before striking at him given the potential for mayhem our soliders would face from these (assumed whether real or not) WMDs. So bluffing at having WMDs was a free deterrent he thought would protect his power. A classic poker bluff.

They openly criticized us and the quality of our evidence. It was junk evidence. They knew it. Everybody knew it except the American and British people, evidently, because they both were the targets of a thinly-disguised sales job.

The Iraqi dissidents had every reason to co-operate in any scheme to unseat Saddam, and CIA internal documents show they did not consider this source to be reliable at all. Yet their known-unreliable statements were often repeated as a justification for war against Iraq. They also selectively grabbed the minority of evidence bolstering the position that Saddam had stockpiles of WMDs we just couldn't find, and ignored the rest, in their making a case for war.

Go ahead Larry, make my day.

Take your best shot.

Put your best foot forward.

All it proves is you can dish it out, but you can't take it.

For your INFORMATION, if you care. Neither myself or Charles started this. I recommend you throw off the Canadian goof, you know the one...your buddy 'Private', Luigi or whatever dumb name he uses.

You see I use my real name and standby what I say. If you think it's racist, I call you a dumbass.

See how it works?

I would love to drop this subject. Tell you what...tell your buddy to shut the hell up and I bet that works.

You must have me confused with somebody else. Just today, two more soldiers of ours KIA, and our forces involved in a firefight which left ten Iraqi noncombatants dead. Tell me, how long will they love us at this rate? How long before the patience of the average Iraqi runs out? We are up against the clock friend. We didn't get into this predicament by accident, we deliberately stepped in it.

Grumpus

No wonder everyone is complaining about you two!  I have been to Canada lots of times and have never met anyone half as stupid as you two.

Posting racial slurs and including your call signs?, what the heck did

One answer is that 2.0 was implemented and used, while 2.2 by and large was neither implemented or used.

In this day and age, you might consider simply using IP for satellite communications. A good place to start might be:

There is no way to remove racist posts by "Private" or "Larry". Sorry!

The "regulars" here have been using usenet for years, and do not have to speculate as to whether posts can be "removed" from usenet. They already know better.

Amazing how consistently ignorant the little "racist" group that has invaded this newsgroup is.

Sooner or later they will all take a hike, and we can get back to discussing amateur radio.

Oh, we gotta be shaking in our boots NOW! Haw Haw Hawr!   :D

A bity of history on: Fighting Arabs

That reminds me of an interview that occurred back in 1967, right after the Israeli 6-day war. Israel had been attacked on all sides by a number of raghead states, who were determined to murder every Israeli man, woman, and child in Israel. (According to the raghead newspapers of the time.)

Of course we all know what happened. Despite having almost no outside support, and with only a few obsolete old French aircraft, the Israelis thoroughly kicked every one of those ragheads countries' asses, taking some of their land from them instead, just to teach the uncivilized scum a little lesson.

Asked about his astounding success in mowing down thousands of screaming raghead fanatics with very few casualties (sound familiar?) , the Israeli general agreed to give the reporter the exclusive secret to his unprecedented military success...

"Fight Arabs." he said.

As for being called a "bigot" by an apologist for ragheads, I couldn't work up too much concern over that.

Historical note: Almost every african who was ever captured and sold in the americas to slavery was captured by arab slavers who had been infesting the congo basin for more than five hundred years. They were there centuries before the brief opening of the market for slaves in america, and were there long after it closed.

The arab slavers would typically take an entire village at a time, murdering anybody who was either strong enough to resist, or too weak to make the long walk on a long, heavy chain to market. Pregnant women and small children were typically murdered because they did not travel well. There is documented evidence of arab slave-raids in the congo basin going on as late as the mid-1950's. The great majority of the african natives captured over those centuries were of course used by the arabs themselves.

The progeny of the africans who were sent to the americas are living free lives in a free country today. As far as can be seen, there are no surviving progeny from the much greater number of africans who did not go to the americas but instead were used by the arabs. Perhaps this is so because castration of slaves has always been a common practice among the arabs.

... So when an apologist for this uncivilized, backward and violent tribal culture calls me a "bigot", I can't help but smile at the irony there.

So the anonymous anti-american Trolls alternately whine and threaten, just like a coy dog.

(Yawn)

For any amateur satellite application it's very important to get advice and help from the amateur satellite community, to ensure that your project uses acceptable protocols. This will smooth the way to a successful mission.

I suggest that you post your requirements to the AMSAT-BB mailing list.
This will enable you to contact many experts in this field.

Another person who is nostalgic about the 9-11 attack, who wants to see the "action" moved back here in the U.S., instead of remaining over there in Iraq.

The children and other innocent people who were vaporised in the twin towers do not count, I suppose. Brenda Ann wants us to pull our troops out so that we can have more of that action here in the U.S...

I'll have to disagree with that kind of thinking. Sorry, Brenda Ann!

Thanks for the link Alan. I was aware of Zogby's poll, but I hadn't seen his summary of the findings. Not too much cause for comfort if you ask me, and these results were from a poll conducted in August before the dire events of recent months. I sure hope Zogby follows up with more current data.

I think what the Iraqi people are telling Zogby is that the coalition should leave Iraq to the Iraqis. They do not want Saddam's jackboot replaced with the yolk of occupation, however benevolent our intentions may seem to be. They don't want a theocracy, nor a secular democracy. Least of all do they wish a government imposed upon them by a governing council handpicked by overlords. What they want most of all is the departure of foreign troops.

The choices confronting us are not attractive. If we leave prematurely Iraq almost certainly will descend into chaos and civil war. The likely outcome of this eventuality is the de facto partition of Iraq into three parts, a Kurdish state in the north, a Sunni entity in the middle, and a Shiaah state in the south with close ties to Iran. This outcome will immeasurably heighten tensions in the region if civil war doesn't lead to regionalized conflict first. Saddam, brutal and evil though he was, at least kept the lid on this pot.

On the other hand, if we stay, our troubles likely will increase. As it would be political suicide for Bush to increase our presence on the ground, something the Democrats just now are trying to goad him to do, we will have to make do with current force levels, and they are insufficient. There is no possibility to send more American troops until the election is over. And I will bet that whichever party takes power in 2004, no matter what they say to get elected, that party will send more troops, not bring them home.

The wild card is how much longer the American public will tolerate 300 soldiers KIA and 2000 wounded (read maimed) every six months, not to mention the exorbitant financial costs of occupation. I suspect that patience is beginning to run out, but that it is not yet exhausted. That may not happen until another administration has tried and failed to manage the occupation. I do believe that by then we will have a mandate to do the right thing and bring the troops home.

Regards,

Grumpus

You're putting words into my mouth, Charles. I said nothing of the sort.
It's (unfortunately) far too late to pull our troops out of Iraq, the course must be stayed... what I have a problem with is Mr. Rumsfelds lassaiz-faire attitude that our troops must die...

And, for the last and final time, Iraq and Saddam Hussein had nothing to do with 9/11.. even Bush has admitted to this now.. get over it.

Yes, I think we are all aware of what you said. My post was in response to what you said.

Mr. Rumsfelds' attitude is the correct one, Brenda Ann. Obviously you have no clue about why a senior commander would speak that way and blame your failure to understand on poor Mr. Rumsfeld. This is unfair, because most adults are very clear on why there will be casualties when our troops deal with dangerous situations.

Remember that if Mr. Rumsfeld talked down to the lowest common denominator, defense department briefs would sound like you had accidently tuned into "Sesame Street". Mr. Rumsfeld speaks out as an adult, to adults. To understand him, you'll have to grow up and be a big girl.

> And, for the last and final time, Iraq and Saddam Hussein had nothing to do with 9/11.. even Bush has admitted to this now.. get over it.

Get over what? The 9-11/Iraq "connection" was brought to us by a liberal political commentator who works for the NY Times a year or so ago, as a straw-man to attack when he had nothing legitimate to complain about. On the other hand, the Iraq/terrorist connection, including correspondence and regular meetings with with Bin Laden have been proven multiple times. I suppose that you can hang onto your bogus view by sticking your head into the sand if you want to, but after all of this time, it would probably be best if you just get over it.

Fortunately, your opinions have no effect whatsoever on anything that will be done in connection with planning the war in Iraq, so if you are most comfortable believing that it's all just the "vast right-wing conspiracy" causing all this trouble for oil money, and that the vile, underhanded raghead terrorists are just innocent "freedom fighters", you are welcome to be just as ridiculous as you want to be.

When you talk anti-american bullcrap that directly endangers our troops by encouraging and giving comfort to the people who are trying to kill them, guys like me will slap you down for being the kind of fool who gets people killed with thier ignorant comments.

The digital voice/data modem for HF looks interesting, but I immediately wondered where the digital voice activity would fit in the bandplan.

The bands are divided into "Voice" and "Digital" segments... Hmmmmm!

That's not very much help on figuring out where the digital voice transmissions should go.

Saddam and OBL just didn't become threats to civilization the moment 9/11 happend. Liberals in this country and around the world, and the United Nations were too busy going ga-ga over their respective Liberal socialist leaders each of which didn't give a damn for 12 years.

What Bush is doing is taking care of all the foreign policy cans Klintoon kicked down the road while he was President of these The United States of America. I know this tears at Liberals, and the 9 Democrat Presidential wannabe's. They had their chances, and they ignored the threats.

Last I knew, unless the Republican oriented college that I went to was wrong, that on the political spectrum, the Libertarian party was more to the right than republicans.....

Religious affiliation does not necessarily mean right wing.... I am sure there are some Jews and people of other religions that think "more to the right" as well.

Not to defend them, but I believe that some of them at least believe that just because one is of, say for instance, the christian faith, that thier own religion is not wromg, even if it does not align with the christian faith.

Probably..... And I am quite sure that alot of people would fit in a few different places on the political spectrum, assuming and thinking the spectrum is a flat straight line going left and right...... (for linear thinkers)

There is a growing mindset in this country, most particularly the pacifist left, that we should become an isolationist nation. LOL

The Timewave site has a brief mention, and AEA has it listed in their catalog. Looks very interesting. Any idea when it will be available?

Considering that the Democrats have said time and time again through stump speeches and Non-Debates, they want to cut and run, I don't see how they will succeed in unseating Bush. Their job just got harder now that positive economic numbers have been coming out lately.

It's late. Timewave was hoping to have it out in the market a few months ago. The lat guess I heard was the beginning of 2004.

of So Damn Insane.(Still working on that one).  And suck the ragheads into the hell storm.

Of course the powers that be could never admit that.  Because if they did the Democrats would be all over them.   But in the meantime we are getting rid of the enemy....And guess what?  It ain't in Boston, or New York,  etc.

A simple Yahoo! search for "us amateur radio band plan" would have given you numerous results.

According to Kenwood's chart:

Digital is used on the following:
28100 - 28200
21025 - 21200 (Also CW)
18068 - 18110 (Also CW)
14025 - 14150 (also CW)
7025 - 7150 (also CW)
3525 - 3750 (also CW)

Hope that helps. Also, try that search I mentioned.

I'll go one step further; not only do the democrats show typical lack of spine in the war on terror, but they would have this country set back the clock on everything we've done and do crawling to the United Nations in apology.

I don't think there are many voters that feel this reflects how they feel. Furthermore, more and more republicans are taking seats on various levels of government through the states... I don't see any grass-roots growth of yellow-bellied liberalism at all.

Hello Everyone,

I'm very new to packet radio/digital communications and am trying to climb up the learning curve too fast. It hurts :-) My question is: What protocol/mode will give me the best data throughput using 9600 baud packet on VHF or UHF? Using standard AX.25 protocol in connected mode I'm able to achieve about 1000 baud throughput. Unconnected I can get about 4000 baud, but of course that is without any error checking or correction. I'd like to get maximum data transfer between two stations...network operations are secondary. I'm guessing using KISS mode would allow me to get better throughput because of the lack of AX.25 overhead, but I'm pretty clueless on how to actually do anything with KISS mode. How do I implement something like TCP/IP over radio? Is that any better than AX.25? Less overhead? I've downloaded JNOS, but I'm not sure what exactly it is or what to do with it. Any suggestions or help would be appreciated. I've searched the web for info on running different protocols in KISS mode, but everything I find seems like it was written for computer scientists in the 1980s.

Thanks!

Andy KB9JOZ

Agreed, as long as you don't interpret the "no 9/11 -- Iraq" connection to mean that Saddam's government was not allies with Al Qaeda.

From the beginning, the war has been about two things:

The widely-publicized (and amazingly enough -- true, despite the conspiracy nonsense) reason for the war was our genuine concern that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction (indicated, not just by US intelligence, but Russian and several others -- including the U.N.'s people) and that they would give them to Al Qaeda to strike covertly at civilians in America.

No sitting president could allow that to happen. Something had to be done about it right away -- our citizens were at risk. When our allies in the U.N. refused to take action, we had to go it alone.

The second reason for the fall of Iraq is that a strong democracy needed to be instituted somewhere (besides Israel) in the Middle East, if we were ever to change the horrible status quo over there. If the institution of democracy in Iraq is successful, kingdoms like Jordan, Syria, and Saudi Arabia will fall, and their people will enjoy true freedom for the first time in centuries.

I could also argue that it has also kept hordes of terrorists flocking to Iraq (instead of New York) to attempt to kill Americans, but we were basically accomplishing the same thing in Afghanistan (though I hear it was tougher for them to get there).

By the way, B.A., you have an amazing depth of knowledge on radio.  I really enjoy your posts.

The modem can do both voice and data. The best place to use it would be in band where both modes are authorized. When using the voice mode you really should be in a voice segment.

I just got my modem (from Universal Radio), and plan to set-up shop in the 20 meter band. Probably the same place where Q15 people hang out (data).

I'm a little pissed that it doesn't have a KISS mode, but actually intend to use it for voice mostly (in my truck), with a GPS tracker hooked-up to it for position ID.

Well for one simple thing you set your "MAXFRAMES" to 7.
Set PACLEN to 255.   That wont change your baud rate but providing signals are good it will give you the max thruput on msg traffic.

Hi Andy

I started typing this and realised you said "packet" protocol. Thought I'd leave it in (below) anyway!

- Assuming you want max throughput on a dedicated channel and dont care about long TX times
- Make sure your maxframes is something huge (7 is max)
- Get your paclen as long as you can. Although 255 is the normal maximum I did some experiments at 768 some years ago (max for my TNC2 in KISS mode)
- Get your TXDelay and TXTail as small as it can go.
- Make sure your error rate from low signal/interference/over deviation etc is nil
- Compress the data stream (grin)

Kiss mode by itself doesnt give you better throughput. It simply makes the TNC a little more "dumb" and allows the host to control it more/better. TCP/IP (I think) over packet adds a little more overhead to the packet length so AX25 "connected" mode is likely to be a little faster. I use to play packet a lot but not for a while. Cant quite remember it all sorry!

I havent seen any implementations using KISS try and send raw data (ie not AX25 in some form) but I guess that you could certainly modem out a data stream and have some kind of error correction built into the boxes at each end. You might be able to use the EC in file transfer protocols like ZModem but it may get upset at not having a full duplex connection. Might be an interesting piece of code to write.

Sorry for being short on this. Ask if you want more info.

Cheers

Have a look at Wyman1x. http://www.svs.net/wyman/examples/hdsstv

It is a one way digital code stream with redundancy/checksums built into the stream. You encode a binary file to a WAV then play it through your radio.

The page above looks like a SSTV piece of sowftare but you can send/recxeive any kind of digital data. There are some graphs on throughput etc possible

There is code for both Windoze and Linux available

Stinger,

YES - The FIRST usefulness of "IRAQ" is that it has become a Terrorist Magnet.
IMHO: Most Americans for what ever reason or politcal leanings would simply say. (If Asked the Question and Given the Choice.)
? Is it better to "Fight" Foreign Terrorist, Over there in Distant Lands, or to Fight Them Here in Our Homeland the USofA ?
[ ] Fight Them Over There (IMHO would get 99.73% of the votes.)
[ ] Then Fight Them HERE! (IMHO would get 00.27% of the votes.)

The SECOND 'usefulness' of "IRAQ" is the Leason for the Rest of the World;  that Peace with the USofA is better than Opposition and War with the USofA.
- The UN, the French, the Germans ETC will not help you if the USofA decides to Deal With You [.]
- - Speaking Softly and Carrying a Big Stick works better in todays real world.
- - - If there is a Terrible Example of what the Big Stick can do to others.
= = = = Iran and North Korea are both more understanding of what the USofA; Can and Will Do If Necessary.

NOTE:  The Leason of the USofA in Vietnam and the USSR in Afganistan is that the USofA 'stayed-the-course' in Vietnam for Twice as Many Years and Paid Four Times (4X) the "Price in American Lives"; as the USSR was willing to do in Afganistan.
- - - The USofA will Pay the Price of using it's Big Stick.

The THIRD 'usefulness' of "IRAQ" is every Terrorist that goes to Iraq is one less Terriorst that goes to Israel to Kill and do Damage there.

The FOURTH 'usefulness' of "IRAQ" is the quite and progressive movement for modernization and change in the Governments and Political Systems of the neighboring states in the region.

Best protocol for scraping up a bit more throughput at 9.6kb? That would be RadioMirror, the terrestrial multicast protocol.

At 1.2kb, RadioMirror can move better than 20 MB of data a day. At 9.6kb, you would do much better than that, of course.

Neither AX25 or TCPIP packet can keep up with RadioMirrors' throughput. Additionally, RadioMirror is an unconnected mode, so you can distribute the data to an unlimited number of receiving stations, or just one. That's up to you.

To investigate RadioMirror, see the "Tutorial" section at USPN: http://www.uspacket.net and also read the article "Emergency Digital Communications - Another Angle" in USPN's "Library" section.

These articles represent the single most comprehensive source of information on setting up and operating this advanced digital mode.

RadioMirror may or may not be right for your application, but it is hoped that you will enjoy reading about it, in any case. I have tested RadioMirror at 1.2kb and was astounded at it's ability to move a lot of data quickly.

Good luck!

Earlier I responded with information about RadioMirror, the multicast protocol for terrestrial packet that offers truly outstanding throughput... - But Andy may prefer a connected protocol. In that case, FlexNet's AX25 stack will give him the best throughput, leaving traditional AX25 and IP systems in the dust.

A standard TNC has close to 100 different parameter settings that influence how well the TNC communicates with the computer over the serial link, and how it performs on the air when hooked up to a radio. Even experts are sometimes confused by some of the more esoteric link parameters, so many of these are left at factory default values that are not what you could call "optimum" but rather represent a compromise.

FlexNet takes full control of all of those link parameters, adjusting them on a dynamic, minute to minute basis for optimum throughput. With traditional systems, you painstakingly adjust the TNC parameters once (static parameters) and hope that it will not be too inefficient. With FlexNet, the parameters are watched and adjusted on a minute by minute basis (dynamic parameter settings controlled by the software's A.I.) so that at any given minute, your TNC is perfectly adjusted to the conditions it finds with a connection.

End result? Significantly better throughput than any other connected mode protocol available to hams.

You have to enter your callsign, your data rate and your TXDELAY... All other parameters are controlled by the FlexNet A.I.. (Artificial Intelligence) It's like having a little TNC expert hiding in your computer, who constantly, expertly adjusts your TNC for you as you operate. This type of software is referred to as an "Expert System", and is the only software of this type that is wrtitten for hams. (That I am aware of.)

Over a good RF path, FlexNet will send up to seven 256 PACLEN packets at a time. (Per key-up of the Xmitter) which gives it a data stream almost as continuous as RadioMirror!

That's nice, but this is even better: When the link conditions deteriorate (static, other traffic, etc.) then FlexNet will "automagically" back off on its radical TNC parameters until it no longer experiences retries, thereby giving you the maximum possible throughput under ANY operating conditions, good or bad - All the time!

When conditions improve again, FlexNet notices within a few minutes and will again open up the TNC parms "like a hose" to give you the very best throughput under whatever operating conditions the software encounters.

You can run IP over FlexNet of course, but the increased overhead will slow you down a little. If you don't have a specific need for it, you will be better off without it.

To find info about FlexNet, look under "Packet Software" in USPN's "Links" page, and see the Flex32 tutorial in our "Turorial" section.

Good Luck! RadioMirror and FlexNet are your two best options for maximum throughput at 9.6kb.

Let us know how it goes!

Yes. It has three branches of government (legislature, executive, and courts).
You don't have to be Jewish to be a citizen, but you do have to be Jewish to become the executive.

Interesting that you mentioned the Indian Nations
The tactics that America is supporting against Islam is the same tactics that we used to take Indian land away and killing all "savages" I.E. the only good Indian is a dead Indian and delay retribution by smoking so called peace pipes.
This is exactly what we are doing in the MidEast. We are supplying missles and weapons of death as we erase villages from the maps, herd what is left into refugee camps formerly reservations, build on their land under cover of peace talks (we have doubled the houses and population in the West Bank in the last ten years) and we condone the killing of all those who object to the land stealing or the confiscation of the holy places. These so called savages pray three times a day where we are schooled to pray once per week and thus are superior.
The one thing that we havent thought thru (The rest of the world has but we have easily prevented any interference in our plans by virtue of a U.N. veto.)
We in America has still not recognised that we are outnumbered with respect to Islam and yet ask for assistance from those who we continualy push aside.
We will continue to see non conventianal fighting by those we tread on and continue to take the stance that they must stop resisting take over of their posessions so that then and only then we can talk about things not withstanding that we will continue to steal while we engage in stalling talks.
Since these people refuse to lie down stay still and be quiet while we do our thing some of our christian brothers advocate the use of nuclear weapons to finish off all that show resistance. We have done it before while we said we are a christian country so if the foundations of christianity have not changed we have the same excuse to do it again. Bush has stated " bring them on " and he is more than willing to hold on to the coats of those are willing to fight for him instead of our Country. How many years will it take for us to realise that we cannot kill off all those that disagree with us without receiving retribution of some sort that will destroy our own way of life and thus kill off our own beginnings.

Remember we have many who follow the faith of Islam thru out our country.
To prove that they are loyal Americans can we ask them to give up their faith without retribution ? What will the modern christian do if the tables are eventualy reversed ?
How sad it is to see the return of body bags because of our crushing of other religeons for our own material gain.

I cannot believe these two clowns are still at it. I found some of their original comments and sure enough they are as racist as they come. People have a right not be discriminated against or abused because of color, race and religion etc....

If they don't stop making racist posts on this "RADIO" newsgroup I am sure people in their own town will find out about them. They will be very embarassed very soon. Keep it up Charlie and Danny... Keep it up....

Bow Wow!

Good luck on attempting to "embarass" me, Fido! One of local hams here joined the Army, and was recently stationed in Baghdad. After being flown into Quwait, he was put in a convoy headed toward Bagdhad airport. Within hours of moving into Iraq, my friend's convoy was attacked and he had to mow down a couple of screaming raghead morons so that they could continue their rudely interrupted cruise down the road to Baghdad. Iraq is infested with hundreds imported raghead terrorists from Saudi Arabia and Syria these days, all anxious to die. Like all of the local hams, The hams in my area are proud that my buddy was able to expedite the way to hell for a few of those worthless arab scum.

Again: Good luck with "embarassing" me, dog-boy!   :-P

Just like you and I.... I am quite sure there are things that we will fight to death disagreeing about, and I am sure there are some things that we will agree on too....

My way of thinking is "Don't hate the man... hate the thoughts driving that man....." As Cecil stated, for the most part I am also closely aligned to the Libertarian party, which is even more "right wing" than the Republicrats, but I do believe in the basic human rights issues. I don't hate all Arabs.... just the fundamental/orthodox ones like Osama, and the others responsible for 9/11 and other related events.

I guess Bush is a genius. Maybe that's what it takes to invent new words. Yesterday it was, "suiciders". It's one thing though to invent words, another to invent enemies behind every tree.

Here's a nice shot of your "genius" hero Rumsfield shaking hands with Saddam a few years ago: http://www.mydd.com/archives/000427.html

Ah, who to believe in this mixed up world. Politicians are politicians. None of which are geniuses. Calling politicians geniuses is a slap in the face to Marconi, Maxwell, and Tesla.

That's a good policy, right up until the point where innocent people are murdered or enslaved by "men" who happen to be thinking those thoughts you hate.

Do not confuse the map with the territory. The thousands of innocent victims of 9-11 were not killed by "thoughts"... They were killed by "men", if you want to be generous and classify arab terrorist scum as "men".

My feeling is that when they step beyond the pale of civilized behavior to become terrorists, then they no longer qualify as "men", but instead must be handled like as you would handle a rabid dog. - You put them out of their misery before any innocent people can end up being hurt by them, and to prevent them from infecting other dogs.

I used to hate the Vietnamese. But now 30 plus years later I can tolerate them. That makes me a racist? OK Im a racist. So what?

I reckon that after we nuke the ragheads and let god sort them out I'll be able to tolerate them also.

How could things have gone any worse? We still don't have Osama, and guys are still dying in Afghanistan even though the news acts like it's fallen off the earth.

As far as Sadam, what, specifically, did he have to do with 9/11?   When it comes down to it, he was probably more of an ally against militant Islamic terrorists than any other.

....and, I'm probably more conservative than you..... There's nothing more liberal than "nation building", something we were told six years ago that wasn't going to happen under this presidency. My how things change.

I'll make a prediction: the 87 billion dollars going to Iraq is just the beginning.

Ryan,

I think that many (most) Libertarians would view themselves as Moderate or more "middle-of-the-road'.

Not as extreme as the "Right Wing" [Ultra-Conservative Christian] segment of the Republican Party.

Or, not as extreme as the "Left Wing" [Socialist Secularist Anti-Religion] segment of the Democrat Party.

Even these extremes from both ends of the political spectrum to some degree 'believe in basic human rights': Although their definition of what those 'basic human rights' mite be, would vary on a point or two.

Let me try to explain thing in special english.

Bush and Rummy are smart.

Most Americans are dumb.

The idea is to occupy territory in the middle of the zoo zone.

The purpose of the army is to kill enemies of the USA.

The Iraqi regime was a enemy of this country.

A. They paid money to the family of the murders that killed women and children in Israel

B. They provided safe passage for terrorists.

C. They provided logistical support to terrorists.

D. In cahoots with Syria they helped to funnel funds to terrorist organizations, such as hezzbolah, which is guarding the Chemical weapons Sadam made in the Beka valley of Lebannon. Which is controlled by Syria.

Have you noticed how quickly Iran has become nice nice with Washington? Think maybe it might have something to do with 130,000 US Combat troops on their border?

You must understand that it is much much better to have ragheads throwing bombs and shooting off RPGs in raghead land, than some city in the USA. You do agree don't you?

So basically I am saying we are using the hell out of Iraq. What place is better to have a fight?

You are hung up on the WMD thing. Move on, history is bypassing you.

I agree, we were mislead. But what is the option at this point? Do we re-call our warriors and watch the middle east explode? We have made our bed and its time we layed in it.

In otherwords we are in the middle of the crap. So we have to take care of business.

I hope that one day you Bush haters will get your head screwed on straight and realize that you are HURTING this country.

Jane Fonda did the same thing about Nam. It hurts morale. It caused American troops to die. It extended the war.

Stop repeating history and back this president so we can take care of business and get the hell out of there.

All you have to do is read your own posts to see who started what.
You got caught, now grow up.

I appreciate your "special english". Very well written and easy to read.

What evades me now are some of the conclusions and logic. On one hand you say Bush and Rummy are smart, then you admit we're in the middle of crap. (Iraq) Who put us there? And, don't go saying it was the terrorists. The terrorists we were after were in Afghanistan, Yemen, and Indonesia, with help from all over the world, including our buddies the Saudis. The response to the 9/11 terrorists should've been considered separately from our policy concerning Iraq. Bush-Cheney did a splendid job of mingling and confusing the two disparate issues.

You wanted a sand box to fight in, what was wrong with Afghanistan? Why the shift? Just as we were moving in on Ladin we did this major shift to Iraq. That made no sense.

As far as Iran, we were already on speaking terms. The upcoming elections and internal moderation were already under way long before this whole mess. Both Iran, and especially Iraq, were sworn enemies of Ben Ladin. They were actually on our side as far as routing out Al Qaida. And, as far as justification for invading Iraq based on supporting Hamas, and others, what about Saudi Arabia, home of The Wahhabi sect, certainly no pals of ours. I don't know what agenda Bush, Cheney, and Rumsfeld had for going into Iraq. Which theory sounds good to you: Being Israel's big brother, or getting our hands on all that oil? Perhaps it was the personal vendetta Bush Jr. had for avenging the threat made to Bush senior by Saddam? Who knows. The point is, we had the World's sympathy after 9/11 and now we've squandered it, along with 87 billion plus dollars into quick sand.

Our option? Re-hire the Iraqi military.....who did NOT fight us while we entered their country. Help them establish some sort of code and leadership, perhaps through the UN.... and leave Iraq to the Iraqis. We're now just 'occupier's, and as such are quickly drawing the ire of all moderate Arabs. People who could help us.

Yep, 87 billion is just the beginning. Real smart your heroes. Oh, and don't leave out Cheney (Halliburton) in your adoration. He's pretty cunning too.

I never realized how some Canadians were.  I always thought Canada and the USA were really like brothers.  I no longer think that way.

Are you feeling OK Chuck?

No one is being anti-american. We are all just tired of your and Daniel's racist remarks on a radio newsgroup.

Stop posting on here already and leave us all alone!

Who is this "we" supposed to be? You and Osama Ben Laden?

Again, you can call my remarks "racist" all you like, but that will not change the facts. My posts all stand on their own merit.

Take your best shot....raghead.

Not quite. That was Walt Kelly, via Pogo.

Bill Mauldin gave us such gems as:

The only unfortunate thing about knocking off Sadaam was that he was hated by Al Queda, and, in return, did his best to exterminate them. The enemy of my enemy isn't always my friend. It's quite possible to have two differing enemies. And sometimes, it's wisest to let you and him fight. I think it will be enormously ironic if we ultimately find that Sadaam sealed his destiny by being a great bluffer.

Sadaam earned his fate by attacking our economic lifeline, and being a generally de-stabilizing force in a region quite important to the USA. Yes, it is about the oil! Just how many Grannys in Schenectady have to freeze to death because they can't afford heat until we recognize that our economy is totally dependent on oil availability & pricing?

Temporarily, we work with despicable foreigners who despise us, because we are dependent on them in some way. The industrial world's dependence on oil has caused the worst economic imbalance we could imagine, giving economic power to many who are unfit to govern a bucket of shit.

The best thing we could do for America would be to greatly reduce our economy's dependence on foreign oil. OTOH, I don't expect this to happen in my lifetime.

Good idea Ed.   How is this to be accomplished?

Everytime a 'plan' comes up the left wing invironemental waco's jump up and down.   Maybe we can start burning trees that are not eaten by the pine beetle. Oh...that wont work either will it?

See my point?

There is an "e-group" at Yahoo.com called Q15x25 which is the best source of info on this mode that I have found.

Hope this helps!

Far from ironic, it was probably part of a deliberate and relatively clever strategy that went awry for this tyrant.

I intend to show (again) why the argument "Saddam Hussein wouldn't thwart the inspections unless he was hiding large amounts of WMDs" is profoundly ignorant. He would thwart the inspections regardless. Let me explain why.

Say, for the sake of argument, that Saddam had MASSIVE stockpiles of WMDs. It would stand to reason he would thwart the inspection process in every way possible, to postpone or avoid their discovery. This much is obvious.

Now say, for the sake of argument, that Saddam's WMD arsenal was decimated in 1991, and he could NOT overcome the inspection regime, the surveillance, and the no-fly zone enforcement to rebuild his arsenal significantly. What would he do? He would thwart the inspection process in every way possible. Why? Because once it came out, that Saddam couldn't outfox the West, it would make Saddam look weak and reduce his intimidation power drastically. Megalomaniacs simply don't do that.

As background, it's perfectly obvious that Saddam Hussein is/was a demagogue with intentions of expanding his influence to rule the Arab world. Does anyone seriously doubt his megalomania? Just look at the cult of personality he's created, if you remain doubtful. He loves (loved?) worship. Now, if you're a megalomaniac dictator, with aspirations to power and influence, who personally gains pleasure from the worship and fear of others, how would YOU act?

First, by "standing up" to the inspections, Israel, or whatever rabidy anti-Western Arabs hate, his popularity among rabidly anti-Western Arabs (of which I hear there are a few) skyrockets. He looks strong and therefore an attractive candidate for leading them. Perhaps even better than Osama bin Laden, his chief competitor to that aspiration. This feeds right into his megalomania. He wants power and followers, and by "standing up to" the allies, and Israel by proxy, he gains major political capital that might have been useful once Saddam had successfully rebuilt his conventional military. A weak nation could be conquered and "Saddamized" rather easily with nothing more than his strong conventional military and an indigenous population of committed sympathetic radicals.

Second, by seeming to have WMDs, he intimidates us more. He uses our stupidity, namely "Why else would he thwart the inspection process at every turn if he wasn't hiding weapons?", against us. Saddam figured the allied forces would think twice before striking at him given the potential for mayhem our soliders would face from these (assumed whether real or not) WMDs. So bluffing at having WMDs was a free deterrent he thought would protect his power. A classic poker bluff.

So it's not very hard to see why he would pretend to have weapons that were blasted to dust in 1991 that he couldn't rebuild.

Where it went wrong for Saddam was he underestimated the single-mindedness of the US Administration to remove him from power. This was something Wolfowitz, Perle, Rumsfeldt, and others had wanted to do for years (cf. PNAC).

With the mounting failures to find any evidence of WMDs in Iraq, the only thing to do for an Administration committed to war was to cook the junk evidence and rush to war at maximum possible speed. And that's precisely what they did.

We achieved the result of pissing off our allies, who understood that removing Saddam was a US political objective that had nothing to do with security of the USA or much of anyone (except Israel, which gains obvious benefits). They openly criticized us and the quality of our evidence. It was junk evidence. They knew it. Everybody knew it except the American and British people, evidently, because they both were the targets of a thinly-disguised sales job.

To bolster the case for going to war, they even went to Iraqi dissidents for threat assessments. The Iraqi dissidents had every reason to co-operate in any scheme to unseat Saddam, and CIA internal documents show they did not consider this source to be reliable at all. Yet their known-unreliable statements were often repeated as a justification for war against Iraq. They also selectively grabbed the minority of evidence bolstering the position that Saddam had stockpiles of WMDs we just couldn't find, and ignored the rest, in their making a case for war.

What went wrong for the Bush Administration, is more and more of the American people (and even more of the British) are seeing that we were sold a bill of goods by a cabal of explicitly dishonest manipulators and their dupes.

What went wrong for the American people is we're losing soldiers virtually every day in a country that posed no significant threat to our security interests, prior to invasion.

I said two things before, and history proved me right on both. First, Saddam didn't have significant WMDs. They will never be found, because they aren't there. Second, the Bush Administration is one of the most incompetent and dishonest we've seen in our history. As the facts emerge (and it will take quite some time given this is by far the most secretive Administration in our history), eventually Bush's Administration will win the mendacity crown from Richard Milhous Nixon.

> Sadaam earned his fate by attacking our economic lifeline, and being a generally de-stabilizing force in a region quite important to the USA. Yes, it is about the oil! Just how many Grannys in Schenectady have to freeze to death because they can't afford heat until we recognize that our economy is totally dependent on oil availability & pricing?

Jimmy Carter tried very hard to get alternative energy programs underway. As you can imagine, it was primarily oil and gas interests that lobbied -- and eventually succeeded -- in killing subsidies to their competitors. Though some falsely claim it was environmentalists who were to blame, this appears only to be true in the nuclear energy case, where in fact environmentalists did great harm by forcing the use of dirty coal instead of at-least-cleaner nuclear energy.

But show me where environmentalists engaged in a concerted successful effort to block government subsidies for wind and solar research in a significant way, and I'll buy you lunch.

> Temporarily, we work with despicable foreigners who despise us, because we are dependent on them in some way. The industrial world's dependence on oil has caused the worst economic imbalance we could imagine, giving economic power to many who are unfit to govern a bucket of shit.

Saddam wasn't fit to rule the viruses in the bucket of shit. I'm glad he's gone, but the US economy will suffer for decades due to the foolish idiocy and dishonesty of this horrible and corrupt secretive Administration.

> The best thing we could do for America would be to greatly reduce our economy's dependence on foreign oil. OTOH, I don't expect this to happen in

Probably not. Until the entrenched energy interests figure out a way to get government money for research, or how to make a profit, or when reserves finally push gasoline up to $5 a gallon or so. Then the tune will change by necessity.
Market forces will eventually compel the use of alternatives to oil and gas. Whether it's in 10 years or 200, I can't honestly guess. Could just as easily be either.

No, this person is just a lone sicko. It was fun yanking his chain for a while but now I'm getting bored with him. It's sad but I've noticed that these sicko types are inevitably very bored, very boring people. I suppose that's why it doesn't bother them to repeat themselves. After all, they have no real expectation of ever saying anything interesting or relevant. - or on topic, for that matter.

Hi Ross, I entirely agree with your assessment of the pathogenesis of the current episode of war fever. This war is the neoconservatives' war. Soon to be the American people's war if it can be conflated, after the fact, with the so-called War On Terror. If the occupation can be made to draw in Al Quaeda and other insurgents and the witting or unwitting participation of other states in the region, then presto, we have the perfect post hoc justification for the invasion in the first place and the perfect pretext for toppling the next domino, so the neocons desire.

But in their overweening certainty and their impetuous rush to war they overlooked the need for international troops to man the occupation and the innate hostility and justifiable suspicion of the Iraqi people. If coalition forces do not find themselves in a quagmire, at the very least they find themselves taking first steps in a long hard slog (an uncharacteristic moment of honest introspection by Rumsfeld or a deliberate leak to better position himself in the internecine blame game now playing out within the administration?). Bogged down as they are in a police action which is dispiriting and not their brief, our troops cannot be cycled out to go onto bigger and better things. If the neocons in charge had played their hand more adroitly, had awaited a season of inspections and won over full international cooperation as did Bush the Elder, then perhaps even now they would be spurring their destriers into Damascas or even into Tehran. The trick now is to bite off more than we can chew, get into grave difficulty, and rally the American people around the troops. Then take another bite. The neocons have repeatedly claimed that the WMD's are buried in the sands of the Bekaa valley, that is why they are nowhere to be found in Iraq. Perhaps this is the next bite of the apple gleaming in their eye. Events, mostly of their own making, have overtaken their resources, not their ambition. If regional war can be achieved, look for a call to resurrect the Draft.

I have read that Rummy and crew established their own little intelligence agency within the civilian side of the Pentagon which examined the raw data collected by the traditional spooks and culled out only the bits which gave credence to a pro-war assessment, even, as you say, going so far as to rely upon the unsupportable evidence presented by unreliable characters such as Chalabi (sic), a member of the diaspora for forty years, and others. Having made their own assessment in their own way, they injected it high up into the national security brief presented to Bush without having it vetted through the Intelligence chain of command. This is how all the dubious claims about Saddam's WMD's and hostile intentions came to be included in the President's speeches, and how the Niger uranium claim, based on crudely forged documents and widely discredited within the CIA and the State Department, seemed to take on a half-life of its own. The neocon chefs cooked the intelligence books. I have also read that Sharon has his own little rump intelligence agency which is mistrusted by the Mossad.

I wouldn't give Bush too much credit for deviousness. Nixon he is not. I think what happened after 9/11 is that the neocons played to Bush's exchatological leanings. I think they duped him and they duped the American people. Maybe now, with the continuing difficulties we face in subduing Iraq, he is wising up and reevaluating how we got into this mess in the first place.

Regards,

Grumpus

No surprise here. Thats how they all are. On the other hand, I don't hide. And I stand by what I said. And I could care less if that puke likes it or not.

Just in case you don't get it...Try this one.   I have advocated from the git-go, before 9/11 which re-inforced my belief, that all the worlds ragheads need to be given a free ticket to Mecca, where we can test our newest tactical nuke.

Like that? Too bad.

And whoever it is, odds are good that both people may be carrying the same mitochondrial DNA (adjusted for mutations) i.e. long lost cousins. :-) 'Course, blood didn't stop Cain from killing Abel.

Hearing people like you it is no wonder so much of the world hates the
